

John Liess Mokena Village Treas. Resigns

John Liess who has served the village of Mokena as village treasurer for the past 18 years, tendered his resignation at the council meeting Wednesday night. Mr. Liess is in poor health and he felt obliged to resign. Mr. Liess was appointed village treasurer in 1912 and has filled the office in a highly efficient manner. Mr. Liess also served the village as clerk before he was appointed treasurer. He held the clerkship for 17 years. He also served as town clerk of Frankfort township for 19 years.

Otto Bartels, cashier of the Mokena State Bank is named as the new treasurer and his appointment will be confirmed by the village board at a meeting next Monday night. Mr. Bartels has had previous experience in this capacity and will be a worthy successor to Mr. Liess.

The village council had a full program Wednesday night. The committee on streets and alleys had a number of matters to settle. The old village speed signs at the north and south entrances to the village which proclaim a speed limit of 10 miles per hour came in for criticism and it was ordered that the old sign boards be removed and regulation metal signs purchased and erected in their place.

Alderman John Balaz reported that cars are being parked too near fire plugs and also are parked in such a way at street intersections as to obstruct the view of approaching cars. The board voted to order and install regulation metal "No Parking Here" signs which are to be placed at the Marti poolroom corner, St. John's church corner, Krapp's store corner and several other places.

Alderman Ona E. McGovney presented dedication papers for the right of way on Wolf road along the old cemetery near the Bowman plant and the board agreed to sign same after conferring with the village attorney.

Alderman John Balaz reported that he had collected $55 dog tax, which is setting a record.

Village Clerk Paul Roessener reported that up to last week 137 auto licenses were sold and that 9 auto owners are delinquent, and some of these had agreed to pay this week. The council ordered all delinquents turned over to Judge John F. Schultz after next Monday.

Questions have been raised as to the legality of the vehicle license act, and Village Clerk Paul Roessener obtained an opinion from Howard Schluntz, village attorney in which he cited court authorities upholding the special vehicle license act of cities and villages in the state.

Village Clerk Paul Roessener further called attention that he had begun the annual reading of water meters in the village and found many meters out of order and some not connected and requested the water committee to meet with him soon to adjust the readings.

Alderman August Hentsch who is in charge of the water department said that so much water was being used for sprinkling lawns and gardens that he was not able to keep enough water pumped to fill the water tank. He reported that some of the water users keep sprinklers in operation night and day.

The annual appropriation ordinance was discussed and will be passed at the re-convened meeting of the board next Monday night.

The council ordered all thistles and weeds in the village limits cut. An order was placed thru Wm. Semmler for auto license plates for next year.

TINLEY Legion News

Arrangements have been completed for the Legion's participation in the July 4th parade. The color detail only will be in uniform. All other Legionnaires are requested to wear their caps and white shirts. The parade will commence promptly at 8 p. m. The Legion float is being arranged by Commrade Berg.

An item in last week's paper stated that A. L. Poorman of Chicago Heights who gave an address at the Flag Day exercises is Department Service Commander. This was in error as "Jack's" title is Department Senior Vice Commander. He is in effect, the assistant to State Commander Ed. Hayer. Jack's many friends thruout the State are booming him for State Commander at the Aurora convention in September. He has the united support of the 4th District which includes the local Post and has loyal backers in the southern part of the state, which was his home until a few years ago.

TINLEY GERMAN M. E. PICNIC JUNE 28

The annual German M. E. picnic will be held in the Harry Brandau orchard the afternoon and evening of Saturday, June 28. Everyone is welcome.

MARLEY TO HAVE OLD TIME 4TH

Marley is all set for a big 4th of July celebration. There will be a big parade. Music will be furnished by the Joliet Collegiate Band. There will also be a program with the following speakers: Rev. A. W. Hoffman, John Everett and others. Radio singers are also on the program. Program and parade at 10:30 a. m., standard time.

Ball game between New Lenox Tigers and Homer Kangaroos will be a live event. Big doings at Storm's Marley Park at close of morning activities. Everybody come and enjoy a real old time 4th of July celebration.

NEW MOKENA SCHOOL HEAD ANNOUNCED

The Mokena school board has engaged the following teachers for local public school for the ensuing term:

Principal, Wayne E. McCleery, Mrs. Eleanor Ferguson, Miss Elizabeth Krusemark and Miss Mildred L. Doig, the latter of Joliet.

Miss Doig is a graduate of the Pestalozzi Froebel Teachers College of Chicago and is also a graduate of the Joliet Conservatory of Music.

The new principal, Wayne E. McCleery, who graduates in June from the University of Illinois with a bachelor of science degree in education, is one of the outstanding men in this year's class, according to Coach Charles Werner. He has had two years' teaching experience at West Aurora Junior high school and has been a member of varsity football and wrestling squads, besides winning numerals in both sports.

Mr. McCleery stands 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, has a genial personality, is an undoubted leader, and has the force and drive necessary to push through to any goal at which he aims. He has the confidence of his associates, who predict that he will succeed in the field of education.

He is a Mason and a member of Acacia fraternity, taking an active part in the work of both organizations. He belongs to Phi Epsilon Kappa, physical education fraternity; Kappa Phi Kappa, education fraternity, and Adelphe Literary society, besides competing in intramural basketball, baseball and tennis.

Scholastically, Mr. McCleery has majored in education and history, studied extensively in the fields of mathematics, English, and public speaking, besides the regular University requirements.

PHOTOGRAPH REVOLUTIONARY WAR VET'S GRAVE

A photographer and a special writer from the Chicago Herald Examiner were in Mokena Monday to get a story on the life of Charles Denny, Revolutionary War veteran who lies buried in the old cemetery near the southern outskirts of the village. A picture was taken of the grave and monument.

The newspaper folk also inquired about the old brick tavern on the Lincoln highway, saying they understood that it had been used as an underground railroad station during slavery days. No known record of this is to be had. A story is still going the rounds to the effect that it was used as an underground station by horse thieves at one time. There is a story current that Abraham Lincoln stopped over night at one time at this tavern but there is nothing to prove the accuracy of this story.

Former Mokena Pastor Drops A $100,000 Suit

Rev. J. A. Warren, former pastor of the Mokena M. E. church who recently filed a libel suit for $100,000 against high officials in the Methodist church and members of his one time congregation at Durand, Ill., due to charges made against him of improper relations with a domestic in his home which led to his unfrocking as a minister, has withdrawn this suit with the understanding that no objections will be made to his seeking re-entry into the ministry of the Methodist denomination.

NEW LENOX CONTRACTOR GETS MOKENA BRIDGE JOB

A. J. Pfaff, New Lenox contractor was awarded the contract for the construction of a new bridge northeast of Mokena known as the Maue bridge for the sum of $1465.45 to be built as soon as the subway under the Rock Island on route 51 is completed. The cost of the bridge will be paid half by the county and half by the township of Frankfort.

LETTERS OF APPRECIATION

Mr. Wm. Semmler,
Editor Tinley Park Times.
Dear Sir:
We, the members of the Tinley Park Garden Club, wish to take this means of thanking you for the many courtesies shown us in past editions of your paper and feel that you are taking a meritorious attitude toward the many organizations of the community who are striving to better the condition and welfare of the community.

Respectfully yours,
THE TINLEY PARK GARDEN CLUB.
Clara S. Goesel, Secretary

Here is a letter of appreciation from the Tinley Park Triangle Club Mr. Semmler:
Thanks for the splendid write up in your paper last week. We appreciate it very much.

SEARS-ROEBUCK FINANCE 12 NEW TINLEY HOMES

The present depression the country over is putting a crimp in the building line this summer. Many people would like to build new residences but cannot finance them. This situation holds good in Tinley Park. Building operations in the subdivisions have been retarded. It is understood that Sears-Roebuck and Company have solved the difficulty by financing the construction of 12 new homes to be erected in the Elmore subdivision south of the village this summer. All material is to be furnished by Sears & Roebuck and local labor will be employed. A new house is also being built at Mokena under the Sears & Roebuck financing plan.

Tinley Awards $20,000 Job To Monee Firm

The village of Tinley Park at a meeting held June 19th let a contract for the construction of a connected system of water mains in 179th Street and other streets in the village of Tinley Park to Hawk & Brockner of Monee, at a total cost of $20,338.

The job will be finished this summer.

NEW MOKENA BOARD OF HEALTH APPOINTED

A new local Board of Health was appointed for Mokena by the village board Wednesday night. The members are:

Dr. E. G. MacMahon, Wm. Semmler, Herman Schweser and Paul Roessener.

RETURN FROM TRIP TO NORTHWEST

Henry Bettenhausen and family of Tinley Park and Fred Marti of Frankfort returned Saturday from a motor trip to Warren, Minnesota and Wisconsin points.

Mokena Sewer Permit Held Up

The Mokena sewer project is still hanging fire. At a meeting of the Mokena Local Board of Improvements held Wednesday, Mr. Cathers the village engineer reported that the state had not granted the permit and that he had written several letters to the State Water Board in regards to the permit but that his communications remain unanswered. Mr. Cathers suggested that Paul Roessener, village clerk write the board and ask them to speed up the issuance of the permit.

Tinley Triangle Talkies

Hello Folks! The club's monthly meeting on Monday, June 23, was quite the "thing".

The entertainment committee should get a "great big hand". The brilliant idea for entertainment was a "weenie roast". The members of the club, including "yours truly", left from the clubhouse at 8:30 p. m., and journeyed to Boeyer's Woods (just a little east of Tinley). On our arrival the sky became cloudy and with the aid of "the God of Thunder" gave us a scare, not of fright but for the fear our party would be spoiled, but all was clear within a few minutes.

To work up an appetite we played "Run Sheep Run" and other such vigorous games. Sometime later we attacked the "dogs". What a victory us humans had over these "fiends", not a one "barked".

Sometime after the feast we decided to start for home. So ended another beautiful time.

Two of our members had a private contest to see who could eat the most "dogs". Their names are, Mr. Klepper and Mesenbrink. It (must have been a tie as we didn't hear any other results. Believe it or not neither one had any ill effects. Marvelous, what!

We are going to tell you a little about the surprise August 2, but think we'll wait just one more week. It's on a Saturday night, in fact the first in August. Remember the date, August 2nd.

The trophies will be on display before the end of this week in some business place. Ask a club member and keep your eyes open for them. These are for the golf tournament now being played.

August 2—Remember!
See you next week!

Robert Yunker, Orland Park Weds Joliet Girl

Miss Florence E. Schweser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Schweser, 102 Hyde Park ave., Joliet, became the bride of Robert Yunker, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Yunker of Orland Park on Saturday afternoon, June 21st at three o'clock in St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena with Rev. G. G. Bratzel officiating.

Miss Ruth Schweser, sister of the bride was maid of honor while Mrs. Alma Lorenz served as matron of honor, William J. Allison of Fairmont acted as best man while Albert Lorenz was usher.

The bride wore white satin with a tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore pink georgette, while the matron of honor wore green georgette. Both carried bouquets of roses.

Mr. Leon Tonn sang "At Dawn" and "I Love You Truly" accompanied by Mrs. E. P. Krapp at the piano.

After a wedding dinner served at the bride's home to members of the immediate families Mr. and Mrs. Yunker left for a motor trip thru the east. Mrs. Yunker is traveling in an oxford gray sport suit with accessories to match. After July 15 they will be at home on a farm near Orland Park.

Evelyn Brier, Orland Is A June Bride

Miss Evelyn Brier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brier and Clarence Kramer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kramer, Sr., of Orland Park, were united in marriage at the Christ Lutheran church in Orland Park Saturday evening at six o'clock Rev. Wm. Medlar officiating.

The lovely June bride was attired in white satin, wore a bridal veil and carried a bridal bouquet of roses.

The bride's attendants were her sisters, Marie and Ruth Brier and a friend from Chicago. They were attired in rainbow colors and carried bouquets of roses and carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother Jacob, Franklin Loebe and Billy Beagley.

Following the wedding ceremony the bridal party went to the home of the bride's parents where an old time German wedding feast awaited the 100 guests present. A three course dinner was served. The rest of the night was given to dancing and song. An open air dance floor provided much merriment for those enjoying dancing. A wonderful time was reported by old and young.

The bridal couple have gone on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls. On their return they will reside in Orland Park where a home is waiting for the bridal couple. Their legion of friends wish them much happiness.

TINLEY PARK GARDEN CLUB

By Mrs. R. J. Hug
GARDENS

God bless gardens, yours and mine,
Where the painted columbine
Neighbors with the stately phlox
And the lovely four-o'clocks.

God bless gardens down the lane
Where a perfumed little rain
Gently bathes a pansy face
And some dusty Queen Ann's lace

God bless gardens mostly where
No one has the time to care,
Be there thistle tops and weeds;
Loving, every garden needs.

May Carleton Lord.
The Tinley Park Garden Club held a special meeting at the home of Mrs. Henry Kehres. This meeting was held for the purpose of completing plans for our fourth annual flower show.

The club decided to hold the show one day only Aug. 20, 1930, the reason for this was because of the heat at this time of the year the flowers do not hold up for more than one day.

Chairman and committees were named for various exhibits and a complete list and schedule for the show will be found on this page in the near future.

Through the courtesy of Mr. John Boeyer some very valuable bulletins were obtained from the Dept of Agriculture. Mrs. Rauhoff picked a very large bouquet of lovely field daisies to send to the flower guild. Mildred Klepper and Howard Mager, also picked a large bouquet of the lovely daisies for our flower guild chairman, Mrs. Harry Mager. (continued on back page)

BIG JULY 4TH CELEBRATION AT TINLEY

The Tinley Park Lions Club and the Tinley Park Post of the American Legion are putting the finishing touches to the big joint 4th of July celebration being sponsored by the two organizations. There will be a big parade commencing at 8 p. m., daylight time and at 8:30 p. m. a dance will be held at the Saenger hall.

An added attraction will be a band concert in the Linden Garden by the Blue Island High School band. Come and have a good time. The dance music will be furnished by Chuck Formento's orchestra.

Wolf Road Project Awaits County Action

The paying of Wolf Road and the construction of the bridges to the north and south of Mokena all rests with the Will County Bond Issue Committee. The right of way has been secured for both bridges and only three more property owners signatures are required to complete all right of way dedications on Wolf Road from the Cook county line to the Cleveland farm.

The matter of securing bids for contracts for the bridges and the paving solely rests with the bond issue committee of which Fred Francis, supervisor of New Lenox township is the chairman. This committee knows that the right of way has been secured but has not made a move to advertise for bids and Mr. Francis says he does not know when his committee will take any action.

What the people of Mokena would like to know is why does this committee not put forth any effort to advertise for bids for the construction work on Wolf Road? The money for the construction work is available, as about $1,600,000 of the bond issue money reposes in the county treasury now, the right of way has been secured, then what is holding up the Wolf Road project?

The Will County Right of way committee has about finished its job here and Mr. Seehausen, a member of this committee says he sees no reason why the county bond issue committee does not get busy and advertise for bids so that the bridge construction on Wolf road can be started at once.

The bond issue committee was to have met last Wednesday but not enough of the members showed up to hold a meeting. A meeting was again scheduled for Monday of this week, and again the members failed to show up so no meeting was held.

Mokena has done its part in helping the right of way committee get the needed right of way and now looks to the county bond issue committee to do its duty in seeing that the Wolf Road is paved at the earliest possible date.

Mokena Camp Fire Girls at Army Show

An invitation was given to the Camp Fire Girls of Mokena to attend the Army Show at Soldiers Field on June 21. Helen Cappel, Genevieve Pfleger with their Guardian Bertha Benson attended. They enjoyed it very much. They certainly wish to thank Major Frank Parker for his invitation and only regret more could not have gone.

Woman Is Spanked By Motorist

Handorf, Cal. It finally happened. Exasperated by a woman driver, John Sordar, 44, forced her to the curb, yanked her from the car and turned her over his knee and then spanked her.

At least that is the story of Mrs. Merie Ritting, who had Sordar arrested. She said she and a woman companion were motoring. When her car collided with Sordar's she continued on her way after the accident, but was overtaken.

The court will decide whether the alleged spanking was justified. Frankfort, Ill., June 24, 1930. Editor News-Bulletin:-

The very excellent suggestion disclosed in above newspaper clipping is worthy of serious consideration by Will County motorists who possess a desire to avoid accidents when motoring on the highways of this county. Joliet and environments have a reputation throughout the state as a region of wild and careless auto drivers.

During a motor trip of 1400 miles this writer saw but one highway accident. On a recent trip from Frankfort to Joliet via the Lincoln highway, four accidents had occurred within an hour's time (one of a very serious nature.)

If auto drivers of either sex, found to have been using an automobile as a plaything, could be forced to submit to a vigorous barrel-stave treatment, much of the whoopee driving now so prevalent, would at once become unpopular.

Yours truly,
C. M. Cleveland.

MOKENA GARDEN CLUB MEET AT BRUDER HOME

The Mokena Garden Club will meet at the home of Mrs. L. G. Bruder next Tuesday afternoon July 1st, at 2 o'clock, standard time

Special Notice

As the 4th of July comes on our regular publication day, this paper will be published a day earlier and all news and advertising matter must be in no later than next Tuesday morning in order to appear in next week's issue.

Army Blimp Flies Over Mokena

Mokena was treated to an interesting sight Sunday afternoon when 19 army planes flew over this section. The formations were a huge U. S. Army blimp flew over the town and adjacent countryside. The blimp flew low so a fine view could be had of it. The pilot did a few fancy stunts in flying and circling and then the blimp headed toward the southwest.

ROUTE 53 NOT TO BE PAVED THIS YEAR, IS LATEST REPORT

Concrete paving work is lagging this summer and it is understood that route 53 which had been slated to be paved this summer from Lockport to Oak Forest, will be sidetracked until next year.

"The Big Parade"— 1865 Model

The Grand Review on Pennsylvania Ave.

The Reviewing Stand

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SIXTY-FIVE years ago the National Capital witnessed the greatest military parade in the history of the nation. It was the "Grand Review" of the victorious Union armies at the close of the Civil war. For two days a solid phalanx of marching men streamed past the reviewing stand where sat the high officials of the nation and when the last echo of the tread of this mighty host on Pennsylvania avenue had died away, Andrew Johnson had seen what no other President before or since has seen—the armed might of America in the form of more than a quarter of a million of fighting men.

When the war ended in April, 1865, more than a million men were in the service of the United States. A still larger number had been enrolled and discharged. Over 250,000 more had been enrolled and were now "encamped in the bivouac of the dead." All in all, throughout those four years of 1861 to 1865, a total of 2,859,132 had been called to military service. Near Washington was encamped the flower of the Union forces—the Army of the Potomac, 170,000 strong, and the Army of the West, 65,000 strong. To celebrate the closing of the war and to give the people an opportunity to look upon the men who had saved the nation, Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, suggested that these armies be formally reviewed in the National Capital before being discharged from service and returned to their homes. Accordingly, under orders issued by General Grant, preparations were made for the review to take place on May 23 and 24, 1865.

Public and private buildings in Washington were decorated for the occasion. Floating flags and draped bunting were everywhere and at prominent places along the line of march were erected triumphal arches covered with floral embellishments. In front of the White House four reviewing stands were built, decorated with regimental battle flags and flowers. The school children of the city, the girls dressed in white and the boys in black jackets and white trousers, were assembled on the terraces and balconies of the Capitol to sing patriotic songs as the soldiers passed. Along the front of the Capitol was spread a huge banner inscribed with the legend: "The National Debt We Can Never Pay Is the Debt We Owe Our Victorious Soldiers." Massed along Pennsylvania avenue, perched in trees and occupying every window and roof of the houses on that historic street, were the crowds which had come from all parts of the North to witness the pageant. It was estimated that more than 100,000 were there, the greatest crowd that Washington had ever seen.

Shortly before nine o'clock on the morning of May 23 a thrill of expectancy ran through the crowd as the magic word, "Here they come!" passed down the line. The blare of a trumpet, the roll of drums—and down the avenue came a little group of horsemen. At their head rode a bearded officer, on his shoulder-straps two silver stars. It was Maj. Gen. George Meade, the victor of Gettysburg, who was leading the Army of the Potomac. Behind him clattered his mounted escort and then in solid rank on rank the men who had fought with Grant at Spottsylvania, at Cold Harbor, in the Wilderness, and at Petersburg, and the men who had divided their rations with the men in gray at Appomattox. Their uniforms were soiled and faded, for there had been no brushing up for this occasion. They marched in the garb in which they had fought and the thunder of their footsteps as they pressed steadily on with the stride of veterans could not be drowned out even by the roaring cheers that greeted them.

At 9:25 o'clock General Meade lifted his sword in salute as he rode past the main reviewing stand in front of the White House. In it sat President Johnson and members of his cabinet. Grouped around them, in brilliant uniform, were the diplomats and envoys of foreign countries. On the President's left sat a stubby, bearded little man who had led this host to victory—Lieut. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. Back of them stood distinguished officers of the army and navy—Halleck, Meigs, Hancock "the Superb" and Burnside "the Splendid but Unfortunate."

At the head of the cavalry corps rode Sheridan's "two boys," Wesley Merritt and George Armstrong Custer. And it was Custer, with his long golden curls and flaming red necktie (that was the badge adopted by his adoring men of the Third Cavalry Division) who, in modern parlance, "stole the show" from all the other officers there.

As this "Boy General," who had been a second lieutenant at twenty-one, a brigadier general at twenty-three and a major general at twenty-four, passed the Treasury building a chorus of 300 young girls in white sang "Hail to the Chief" and showered him with bouquets. Gallantly he tried to catch one of the wreaths on the point of his saber and for a moment loosened the tight rein he held on "Don Juan," the magnificent black charger which he rode. In a second the horse had bolted and despite the efforts of the great rider on his back tore at top speed down the avenue. As Custer fought in vain to regain control of his mount, his hat fell off, his bright curls streamed in the sun and it was this unforgettable picture of "the last of the Cavaliers" which burst upon those in the President's reviewing stand where in a last effort of superb horsemanship Custer brought the black charger to a halt. As he rode by the second time, in regular order, the applause which had greeted the other marchers seemed but a whisper compared to the roar that went up to meet this smiling youth, now nearly covered with garlands of flowers.

Shortly before three o'clock that afternoon the first day of the "big parade of 1865" had ended. It had taken the veterans of the war in the East more than six hours to pass the reviewing stand. On the morrow their brother veterans from the West would have their chance for the plaudits of the crowd. "Before daylight the fire companies of the city were out watering the streets for the splendid military display of General Sherman's army" reads a contemporary newspaper account of the second day of the review. "At 9 o'clock Gen. Sherman, heading the column, marched down Pennsylvania avenue amid the din of huzzas and congratulations and a hailstorm of bouquets and wreaths."

Major-General George A. Custer

In his Memoirs, Sherman gives a vivid description of the march of his men. He says: "When I reached the Treasury building and looked back, the sight was simply magnificent. The column was compact and the glittering muskets looked like a solid mass of steel, moving with the regularity of a pendulum. We passed the Treasury building, in front of which, and the White House, was an immense throng of people. As I neared the brick house opposite the lower corner of Lafayette square some one asked me to notice Mr. Seward, who, still feeble and bandaged from his wounds (Seward was stabbed the night of Lincoln's assassination) had been removed there that he might behold the troops. I moved in that direction and took off my hat to Mr. Seward, who sat at an upper window. He recognized the salute, returned it, and then we rode steadily past the President, saluting with our swords. All on his stand arose and returned the salute. Then, turning into the gate of the Presidential grounds, we left our horses with the orderlies and went upon the stand. I took my post by the side of the President and for six hours and a half, stood while the Western army passed in the order of the 15th, 17th, 20th, and 14th corps.

But if this review represented all the pomp and circumstance of war, there was a reflection of its horror and cruelty, too, in the march of Sherman's men. For along with them marched thousands of freed slaves, sheep, goats, pigs, cows and horses, which "Sherman's Bummers" had picked up along the way. In their ambulances and pack trains were game cocks, poultry, calves, jewelry and a miscellaneous collection of other articles, brought with them back from their campaign of devastation through the South. Perhaps the cheering crowds, looking upon these men in blue as the saviors of the nation, gave but little thought to the true meaning of that strange spectacle, nor realized the agony of defeat, of hunger, and of poverty for years to come for the people of their own blood which this part of the triumphal march represented.

But even though this tragic aspect of a civil conflict was lost upon them then there were, no doubt, among the spectators, hundreds who looked beyond the ranks of the marching men and saw the invisible ranks of those who were present in spirit only in this grand review. It was this phantom army, the thousands of soldier dead, some of whose bones still lay unburied on the battle fields of the South, that Bret Harte celebrated in one of his finest poems when he wrote:

I read last night of the Grand Review
In Washington's chiefest avenue,
Two hundred thousand men in blue,

I think they said that was the number—
Till I seemed to hear their tramping feet,
The bugle blast, and the drum's quick beat,
The clatter of hoofs on the stony street
The cheers of people who came to greet,
And the thousand details, that to repeat
Would only my verse encumber—
Till I fell in a reverie, sad and sweet,
And then to a fitful slumber.

And then I saw a phantom army come,
With never a sound of fife or drum,
But keeping time to a throbbing hum
Of wailing and lamentation:
The martyred heroes of Malvern Hill
Of Gettysburg and Chancellorsville,
The men whose wasted figures fill
The patriot graves of the Nation.

Modern English Youth Lacking in Sentiment?

Hundreds of church bells throughout England are silent because young men refuse to take any interest in the delightful, if somewhat strenuous, art of bell ringing.

"We require six hefty young men to pull the ropes," said Rev. E. M. Davys, vicar of Cromer church, recently. "Our bells have not been rung for nearly a year."

Cinemas, motor-omnibus services from villages to towns and football matches are among the reasons given for the shortage by E. A. Young, secretary of the central council of church bellringers. "The present age," said Mr. Young to a representative of the Sunday Express, "is a rotten age. It is almost impossible to get bellringers in either London or the country."

"At one time villagers were proud to do the work for nothing. The young man of today wants to know what he is going to get out of it. Nearly all bellringers now are either middle-aged men or women."

Modern Youth Had Eye to the Possible Future

"Christians take betrothals and marriages too lightly," said Rabbi Magnin. "They dart in and out of matrimony with as little concern as they pass through the revolving doors of their apartment houses. Matrimony has become a game, rather than a sacred obligation."

"Not very long ago a jewelry firm called me up and said that a young man, a Christian, by the way, had given my name as a reference in order to get an engagement ring on the installment plan. Later, when I saw the young fellow, I asked:

"Why in the world do you want to buy an engagement ring on the installment plan when I know you can afford to pay cash for it?"

"Because," he replied, "it relieves me of some of the responsibility for getting it back if the engagement is broken."—Los Angeles Times.

One Example That Upset Young John D.'s Theory

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., lecturing to a class at the Carnegie institute, declared that there was no such thing as luck. "No matter what seems to be lucky," he declared, "will prove strictly a case of cause and effect, when carefully analyzed. It is work and ability of some sort that makes success, even for those chaps whom we are prone to call lucky."

"And yet, Mr. Rockefeller," interposed a student, "I have a friend who really is lucky, with no sort of work or ability connected with it."

"You'll have to show me," grinned John D., Jr., and the class declared that its fellow member did make good when he said:

"Well, I have a friend who's got a wife and a cigarette lighter and they both work."

Ate Till His Chair Dipped

Perhaps the first dietician, says an article in Good Health, was Sanctorius, the inventor of one of the forms of the thermometer, of whom history relates that he was accustomed to weigh himself before each meal and also to determine the weight of the food he intended to eat. He built for himself a chair which was connected with a high steel rod on which there was a movable weight. The weight was pushed over to equal the amount of himself and his food. Then sitting in the chair he would eat until the chair dipped, when he would end his repast.

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.

Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Whale's Diving Power

It would be impossible for a whale to descend to the bottom of the ocean at any considerable depth of water. Although it cannot be exactly known, it has been estimated that the maximum dive of the whale is approximately 100 fathoms—that is 600 feet—and at any greater depth than this the pressure of the water would be too great for the safety of the whale.

Bounty for Beetles

The government of Australia pays a bounty of 25 cents a pound for water grubs or grayback beetles which last year caused millions of dollars worth of damage to the sugar plantations. Two residents of Brisbane made $1,000 in 10 days catching beetles and turning them in for bounty.

FINANCED economically

LOW COST is only one of the savings in buying a new Ford. You also save on the cost of financing, on any accessories you may want and on the cost of operation, replacement parts and service.

The economies in distribution are just as important as economies in manufacture in keeping down the price of the Ford. The money you pay goes into increased value for the car. It is not wasted in excessively high selling costs.

On the basis of performance and the inherent worth of every part, the new Ford is unquestionably the greatest dollar for dollar value ever offered in automobiles.

4th to Be Celebrated by Legion

The Legion announces a program for the 4th as follows:

July 4th we are conducting an elaborate celebration in our community. At 1:00 p. m. sharp a parade will form at our Clubhouse and proceed to the Rock Island Depot where the flag raising ceremony will be held. In this parade there will be members of our local Post, Auxiliary, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Legion Junior Baseball Team, Midlothian Aces and competing teams. Leading the parade there will be three drum and bugle corps. After the ceremony at the flag pole the procession will go to the playground where the Legion Junior baseball team sponsored by your local Post will play the Junior team sponsored by the Homewood Post.

Immediately following this game there will be field events; prizes to be awarded to the winners. Following this there will be another baseball game between the Midlothian Aces and the Frisco Athletic Club of Blue Island.

Saturday evening, June 28th, the Camp Fire Girls, sponsored by your local Post, will conduct a public dance in Kreis Bros. garage. Everyone is invited, and we urge you to attend this function as it will help the girls carry out their various programs thruout the year.

Beginning one week before July 4th, we will conduct fire works stands, which will be located in the vicinity of the Rock Island station, and we solicit your patronage.

We are planning to have markers placed at the village limits of all five highways requesting motorists to watch out for our children.

Your local Post is growing in numbers and activity, but we would like to have a one hundred percent membership of eligible ex-service men in our community, and we hereby extend a hearty invitation to all to join this, your Post.

KENNETH SIDELL
Commander

E. J. SPORER,
Adjutant.

Midlothian Legion News

Who are members of The American Legion? What are they doing in civilian life? Do they retain the Wanderlust engendered by their years of service at home and abroad, or have they settled down in homes of their own?

These questions are answered by statistics tabulated by The American Legion magazine. The figures show that the Legionnaire has settled into the life of the nation in a manner fortunate for the country's welfare.

Many Legion men have gone back to the farm, according to the magazine, there being 102,737 subscribers listed as farmers, ranchers and cowboys. Next come clerks, 82,100; then salesmen, agents and buyers, 49,470. Other classifications are laborers, 47,152; mechanics, 44,396; doctors and surgeons, 27,035; public officials, 22,877, and managers, 22,470.

There are 16,932 lawyers; 10,855 contractors and builders; 7,377 dentists; 13,085 professors, teachers and principals; 6,112 nurses; 13,100 railroad men; 5,215 restaurant men; 2,692 clergymen; 2,640 actors and musicians; 5,840 printers; 4,430 newspapermen and publishers; 407 artists; 1,315 photographers, and 7,267 barbers.

The Army and Navy retained 5,937 Legionnaires on their rolls while 2,230 are inactive in those branches. There are 11,153 chauffeurs and drivers; 140 designers; 2,042 inspectors; 3,015 lumbermen; 3,512 manufacturers; 7,165 miners; 2,797 oil workers; 4,965 realtors; 407 scientists; 7,710 students; 55 trappers; 86,112 merchants and dealers; 14,065 engineers and surveyors; 2,845 telephone operators, and 425 domestic and servants.

Almost three-fourths of the Legion members are married, the percentage being 73.4 per cent. Of this number a goodly portion own their own homes and from the to-

R. I. Ditch Hearing Postponed

As public notices had not been sent out, the hearing on the Rock Island ditch proposition set for Tuesday night was indefinitely postponed. Notices were not sent, it was said, because the drainage had not yet met with President Elmore of the sanitary district. In the near future this committee will meet with him and hear his plans for sewage disposal for this district. The entire matter of drainage in this village hinges upon the result of this interview. Although the district is said to be tied up for ten years on a disposal court order, Mr. Elmore has intimated that the sanitary district has some plan for consideration. When the ditch matter comes up again it will be necessary to repass the resolution.

In order to give the public a chance to express their opinions, Mr. Consoer explained the plan and the meeting was thrown open to the public. In a remarkably quiet and friendly spirit questions were asked and objections raised. As a whole the crowd appeared to be opposed to the project.

Most of the criticism came from the East End; it was said that the ditch would not benefit that section unless all ditches were graded or tile laid; that open drains from septic tanks would be objectionable. Another objection was that the Rock Island would be the principle beneficiary thru getting dirt for a third track.

Mr. Knight, himself an engineer, expressed himself favorable to the ditch, but with certain minor objections. He thought that costs would be lower somewhat later.

In closing President White assured the public that no steps would be taken without ample notice. The regular village board meeting followed.

Trustee Robinson reported that no water would be available in the 147th st., pipes unless the McIntosh system were taken over by the village.

The Citizens Committee, reporting on the fire truck, declared the equipment to be better than that specified on the bids, but suggested two minor changes. Believing that the fire company would rectify these without objection, the ordinance providing for the purchase and the levying of a tax was passed.

On garbage removal, Fred McDonald bid $48 and Frank Sippy $40; the latter was accepted and a contract will be drawn up with him. A routing system will be included, the details of which will be printed later.

The street vacation desired by Nagel & Stolz was referred back to the committee. Stop lights for 147th st. were suggested and referred to joint consideration by the committee on public safety and streets.

Police chief Terry defended the practice of arresting motorists going thru the stop sign on 147th and Crawford by pointing out that the action was taken on orders of the state superintendent of police and was OK'd by the Chicago Motor club.

Fire Chief McEwan requests that motorists pull to one side for the fire truck. The practice of trying to pass the truck and blocking it will result in serious injury or death if it is continued.

Mrs. Berdon, Mrs. Eula Mason, and Mrs. Wm. Gorman, Mrs. Baker took about 36 Midlothian children to Hammond Beach on a day's outing.

Mrs. C. Walker and Mrs. Wm. Gorman played 15 Holes at the Dixie Hi Golf Club Friday.

tal of married and unmarried, there are 393,633 veterans who own automobiles.

"What kind of picture does the mighty army of this list give you?" the Legion publication asks. "Surely not one of class organization. It spells success by veterans since they left the service. It means a self-contained economic family which could take care of itself in all the essentials of civilized life."

Famed Chevie Goes Up in Blaze of Glory; Loss Mourned

Edward Buchbinder had a Chevie somewhat old, it is true, but a good, reliable car for all that. Edward also has a sister, Margie, aged 17, and a very good kid as sisters go, says Edward. But the Chevie and the sister, they had strange experiences when left together.

Last summer Margie took Chevie to Shedd's pond for a swim—that is, she did not intend to take the car in for a swim, but the weather was warm, the pool looked inviting, so Chevie started down hill. Now Chevie have their points, but submerging is not suited to their form. A lifesaver in the form of a tow truck brought the car back to earth.

Township Treasurer Presents School Stastics

Fred Goebel, township school treasurer will contribute a series of articles dealing with the school districts of Bremen township, starting with this issue. Mr. Goebel has been township school treasurer for ten years; when he took office there were no debts on any school in the district.

His articles will deal with the school census, teachers, financial statistics, value of school property, and the history of the township schools from 1862.

He recently inspected the new Midlothian school and declared that "the workmanship is excellent and as good as any ever built in the township." His opinion means some thing, as his father was a contractor and he worked at the business for five years with his father.

This week Mr. Goebel presents the following statistics:

The School Board of District 143 are to be congratulated for keeping their teachers from year to year as you will note one teacher has been teaching for seven years, one for six years, two for five years, five for four years, two for three years, two for two years and four for one year, making the total years of teaching of these 17 teachers 57 years. This is one of the best systems any school district can follow. The school board as well as the children and the parents are benefited by cashing in on the experience of these teachers.

Stop Lights Asked

At the regular meeting of the East End Improvement association last Thursday evening it was decided that the village board should be asked to install stop lights at each side of the Rock Island tracks.

It is asked that one light be placed at Abbottsford rd. and 147th st. to stop west bound traffic; the other just west of the spur track, to stop east bound traffic. Members say that the number of persons crossing the road at this point and the congestion caused by cars backing out from the depot make signs or lights necessary at these points.

ROBBINS FIRE SATURDAY

The new fire truck had its first real test at 3 a.m. Saturday when a call for help was sent in from Robbins. The siren had hardly stopped blowing when the truck was on the scene.

The fire totally destroyed the home of Richard Moore. Local firemen believe that at least part of the house could have been saved if the call for assistance had been sent earlier.

In getting out of his garage, Volunteer R. K. Cumming demolished the doors of his garage, which had swung shut before the car backed out.

Fred McDonald who injured his back while moving furniture two weeks ago, is again able to be back on his ice route.

Veleta-Pobjecky

Marnell Vernon Veleta of Tinley Park and Mary Pobjecky of Markham were married at a pretty garden wedding in Markham Saturday evening. Reverend Mr. Dudley of Chicago performed the ceremony. Early Sunday morning the young couple left for a honeymoon trip to Niagara, New York and Atlantic City. On their return they will make their home in Tinley Park.

The bride was gownned in veiled white satin; the bridesmaids wore rainbow colors and the matron-of-honor wore apple green. The six bridesmaids were: her sister, Yolanda Pobjecky, Helen Vratina, Susan Gusty, Pearl Wener, Eleanor Nerad and Mrs. Ira Hill. The Matron-of-honor was her sister, Mrs. John Kelly. The flower girls were the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Shourek. John Kelly gave the bride away.

Among the 250 guests were Mr. and Mrs. Napier of Blue Island, "Shorty" Shourek of Roseland, and Mr. and Mrs. Rohe of Blue Island. A five-piece orchestra played and motion pictures were taken. Richard Napier sent 250 peonies for the decorations. Many beautiful gifts, as well as money, were given the bride.

The parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Ben Veleta of Tinley Park; the mother of the bride is Mrs. Vera Pobjecky of Markham.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

After four months of waiting, the teachers of district 143 were paid at the meeting of the board on Wednesday of last week. A tax levy ordinance was passed calling for the same levy as last year. The school census was ordered started. Members got away fairly early—the meeting only lasted until midnight.

AUTO IN COLLISION

A Paige driven by Arthur Arian of Oak Forest was badly damaged at noon Monday when another car came thru a stop sign at 95th and Keane ave. and crashed into the Paige.

It is reported that the driver of the other car attempted to escape, but was caught and arrested by Willow Springs police.

ARMY BLIMP PASSES

An army blimp passed over Cicero ave. and 147th st. about noon Monday, headed south.

Bremen Township Health Topics

Eleanor Gallagher, R. N.

There has been a number of complaints handed in recently of septic tanks that overflow and outdoor toilets that are not properly taken care of. The best advice I can get from persons who are well versed in the adjustment of septic tanks is that if the owner of the overflowing tank will dig a trench fifteen to twenty-five feet from where the end of the tiling now is, and put in additional tile, also dig a hole at the end of the tiling and fill it with coarse, broken rock this will help greatly in taking care of the overflow. Where there is any drainage from the septic tank running into a ditch the offensiveness can be greatly reduced by putting lime where this drainage empties. Also persons using the out-door toilet should frequently apply lime to keep down the offensive odors.

We have had a few complaints of merchants leaving vegetables and other decaying material in the rear of their stores. This we feel is entirely unnecessary as every merchant has his own truck and can very easily have this refuse hauled away once or twice a week. This is important as decayed garbage breeds flies and flies spread disease.

On the Fourth of July the Midlothian Aces and the American Legion will have a ball game and flag raising. The Aces will play the famous A. C.'s of Blue Island. After the flag raising exercises there will be a field meet consisting of six events, prizes to be donated by the people of Midlothian. More about the field meet will be had in the next edition of THE MESSENGER. Come out and stay all day and have a good time.

EAGLES WIN

The Midlothian Eagles took a fast game from the Harvey All Saints, Sunday by the score of 7 to 4. Ossie Gronwall turned in his third straight victory of the season, allowing the Saints only 8 scattered hits that netted them 4 runs.

The Eagles led by Hille and Tschuelin turned 18 solid blows into 7 runs which proved to be the margin of victory. DeRudder played a steady game behind the plate while Hille made several spectacular catches in center field. The Eagles rounded into form Sunday to take on the fast stepping Aces the 29th at the home diamond. The starting lineup will be Brossart, Tschuelin, Stevenson and Stuart in the infield; Ormsby, Hille and Bladen in the outfield. Gronwall will pitch and DeRudder will do the catching.

The game which is to decide the baseball supremacy of Midlothian is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock sharp. Come out and boost your choice. Sunday's lineup:

Big Time Sunday for Republicans

The Bremen Township Republican club is giving their second annual picnic and barn dance at Clarke's woods, 147th and Cicero ave., on Sunday, June 29, starting at 2 p. m. The committee extends a cordial invitation to all to come, bring their lunches, and spend the afternoon and evening.

Republican candidates in the fall election will speak. Among those expected are Louis Nettlehorst, Otto F. Reich and the five candidates for county commissioners.

In the afternoon there will be races for boys up to 10, those under 15, for young men and fat men. Girls and women will race in like groups. A nice group of prizes are offered. There will be plenty of refreshments on hand.

POSEN

Mr. and Mrs. John and Francis Mikrut announce the wedding of their daughter Mary to Stanley T. Zimny on Saturday, June 28th at 10 o'clock high mass at St. Stanislaus church. A reception will follow at Zwijacz hall, 144th and Division st.

The Posen Aces won 3 to 2 over the Bellas team at Calumet Park Sunday.

The village board had oil sprayed on 144th st. from Western to Harrison and on McKinley from 144th to 145th last Saturday.

A pretty bridal shower was held June 19th at Zwipez hall in honor of Helen Kulasa.

A farewell party was held Saturday for Julia Jablonska at her home on 144th and Campbell. Monday she entered the convent of the Felician sisters at 3800 Petersen ave., Chicago. Her friends wish her success in her vocation.

FRANKFORT

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wieland was baptized Sunday by Rev. G. Gerholt of the St. Peter's Evangelical church, name given being Marcella Doris. The sponsors were: Dora Wieland and Conrad Bettenhausen.

Mrs. Lawrence Dittich of Frankfort and Miss Florence Woodcock and Jack Woodby of Peotone visited Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Horton Fehland in Monee.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hossbach had their infant son christened last Sunday by Rev. G. Gerholt, the name given being Norman William. The sponsors were: Mrs. Carl Bettenhausen, Harold Hossbach and Walter Minger. They entertained a large number of relatives in their home.

The Frankfort Girl Scouts under their leader, Mrs. W. V. Hedges had their outing in Kampe's woods on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Weber visited Monday with their cousin Mrs. Paule who is ill in the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Dittich entertained the following guests in their home the past week: Mr. and Mrs. Tony Tezac and daughter Dorothy of Davenport, Iowa, Mrs. Louise Pilz, Mrs. Clara Pilz and daughter, Betty, Mrs. Marie Marney, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Ludwig all of Lockport, Mrs. Ruby Bell of Plainfield and Christ Ruthenbeck of Troy.

Mr. Fred Krusemark of Chicago and Brother Albert Krusemark of Frankfort are spending two weeks at Star Lake, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Fred Leppa who has been ill for sometime, remains the same. Louis Krusemark and Alvin Marti were fishing at Lemont Tuesday. They reported fishing good there.

William Heiland of Joliet well known in Frankfort is very ill in his home. He is a brother of Mrs. Fred Lembke and Mrs. Fred Ebert.

Mrs. Fred Baumgartner attended the wedding Saturday afternoon of her grandson, Robert Yunker of Orland Park and Miss Florence Schweser of Joliet. The wedding took place in St. John's church in Mokena. A reception was held in the home of the bride's parents in Joliet.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Minger of Spencer spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Minger.

Chester and Evelyn Pfaff of Chicago spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pfaff, Sr. The new house of Mr. and Mrs. George Haass will soon be completed.

ORLAND PARK

The congregation of the Orland Park M. E. church will hold their annual Fourth of July picnic in the Creer grove. A fine time is in store for all who attend.

The village board met Monday night and the city fathers rejoiced to find that the recent collection of taxes in Cook county had helped to fill the depleted village treasury and the village is now out of debt with a good balance on hand. The village is considering treating some of the streets with a road coating preparation and several agents were at the meeting to submit prices.

Born on Monday a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Powell of Joliet. They were former Orland Park residents.

The postponed church picnic held last Wednesday by the Christ Lutheran church in the Forest Preserve adjoining Orland Park, was a big success socially and financially.

BEANS

Every family should be well supplied with canned beans for winter use. We know they are conducive to good health and they add attractiveness, palatability, variety and bulk to the diet as well as mineral salts. The only way this supply can be furnished is by canning during the growing season.

The United States Department of Agriculture recommends that we use the pressure cooker for canning all types of beans due to the fact that beans are a non-acid food and as such are more difficult to properly sterilize. A pressure cooker

OFFER $5,825 IN PRIZES IN NATIONAL CANNING CONTEST

To ward off a threatened surplus of farm products in many sections and to impress more housewives with the economy and healthfulness of home canned foods, a National Canning Contest is now under way to find the best jar of canned fruit, vegetables and meat in the country. Two hundred and twenty-two cash prizes totalling $5,825 have been hung up by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, including a grand sweepstakes prize of $1,250 for the best jar of canned food entered in the contest. Any woman or girl is eligible to enter the contest, but entries must be in not later than October 1, 1929. Further information on the contest and free jar and entry blanks for sending in entries may be had by writing to Anne Williams, director, National Canning Contest, 925 S. Homan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Facts About the Telephone

Only 14 per cent of the world's telephones are out of reach of the American system.

The number of telephones in the United States is increasing at the rate of about 800,000 annually.

The American people are estimated to send more than 27,000,000 messages over the telephone in the course of a year.

The Bell Telephone Company of Canada plans to spend over $30,000,000 for new telephone construction in Ontario and Quebec, this year.

There are now about 77,000,000 miles of telephone wire in the United States compared with 67,360,000 miles the year before.

Radio Reaches Out To Many Other Arts

In addition to transoceanic service, radio, now being developed as a point-to-point communication system, promises this year to add considerably to the transcontinental telegraphic facilities of the United States, according to David Sarnoff, Executive Vice President of the Radio Corporation of America.

"Radio as a service to the home has been reaching out for association with other established arts of entertainment and education," Mr. Sarnoff says. "In the refinement of musical and speech reproduction, in combination with the modern phonograph (to render the two distinct services involved in broadcasting reception upon the one hand, and in recorded, selective programs upon the other), in the field of sound-motion picture development, radio faces another season of progress."

"It includes in its scope both sound and sight, both color and perspective."

"It is the first system of communications that has largely removed the limitations of time and space from the distribution of music and speech; it promises eventually to transmit the spectacles of life by sight communication. No channel of transmission offers a greater field of expression to the entertainment art."

INSTITUTE TO FORM SCHOOLS OF RADIO

Announcement just has been made of the formation of the R.C.A. Institutes, Inc., a subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America, for the purpose of establishing radio schools in various cities throughout the country to meet the steadily increasing demand for trained radio men. The new organization is the successor to the Radio Institute of America, formerly the Marconi Institute founded in 1909, and the oldest commercial radio school in existence. Rudolph L. Duncan, for many years Director of the Radio Institute of America, is president. General J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, is Chairman of the Board.

Headquarters and the main school will be at 326 Broadway, New York. The new organization has acquired also the Philadelphia School of Wireless, founded in 1911, and the Eastern Radio Institute of Boston, founded in 1913.

IF ICHABOD CRANE HAD A FLASHLIGHT

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers
Association

WE ALL remember the story of Ichabod Crane and the headless horseman. There was the dark form by the side of the road—thundering hoofs on the Sleepy Hollow highway—and Ichabod fleeing in confused terror before this terrible monster. If Ichabod had only known that his hobgoblin was an inventive rival disguised with a pumpkin head, he would have had a good laugh and gone on with the business of vanquishing his competitor.

What Ichabod really needed was a modern flashlight. Then he would have discovered the trickery at once. Many business men need the flashlight of analysis to uncover the hobgoblins in their business and then they might sit back and laugh at their rivals who hesitate to investigate and learn the truth.

At this time, when business and banking are making strenuous efforts to have a clear vision ahead, it is especially important that the power of research and analysis be employed to their fullest extent. When these two brothers of good management have been pressed into service in all fields, I am confident we shall see a further lessening of periods of stress. However, I believe business in general has learned the valuable lesson that any prosperity that is not leavened with a little adversity would not seem basically safe or sound.

RESERVE SYSTEM'S DIVIDENDS ANALYZED

Bankers Find Increased Payments to Member Banks Would Be Small Inducement.

Various proposals that member banks in the Federal Reserve System should participate more largely in its net earnings through an increase in the dividend rate above the present fixed 6 per cent "would be a very small financial inducement" to them, it is declared in a recent study of this subject by the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association. This is shown, the commission says, by a theoretical forecast, on the basis of the past six years, of additional earnings that would be disbursed to member banks during the next six years under two plans introduced in bills before the United States Senate.

"The Fletcher bill provides that Federal Reserve Bank earnings, after present 6 per cent dividends to members and completion of a 100 per cent surplus, should all be distributed as extra dividends to the stockholder banks," the report says. "If the earnings of each Federal Reserve bank were distributed among its own members there would be no extra dividends in the Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago and San Francisco districts during the next six years, but the other six Federal Reserve Banks would pay annual extras at the following rates: Richmond, 6.08 per cent; Atlanta, 4.09 per cent; St. Louis, 3.50 per cent; Minneapolis, 9.51 per cent; Kansas City, 5.48 per cent; Dallas, 4.83 per cent.

"If the earnings were pooled and paid out to all members in all districts each member would receive an average annual extra dividend of .73 per cent. Under this plan no franchise tax as now would be paid by the Federal Reserve Banks to the Federal Government.

Another Plan Analyzed
"The Glass bill would provide that, after present 6 per cent dividends, one-half the remainder should be paid to member banks as an extra dividend with the residue going to surplus and Federal Government as franchise tax. The average annual extras to members would be as follows: Boston District, 2.51 per cent; New York, .48 per cent; Philadelphia, 2.05 per cent; Cleveland, 2.09 per cent; Richmond, 3.26 per cent; Atlanta, 4.67 per cent; Chicago, 3.20 per cent; St. Louis, 2.02 per cent; Minneapolis, 4.75 per cent; Kansas City, 2.74 per cent; Dallas, 3.31 per cent; San Francisco, 1.87 per cent.

"If these extra funds were pooled the result would be an extra average annual dividend of 1.73 per cent for each member. Under this plan the system would still pay as now an annual franchise tax, amounting to $1,941,996 on the average."

By way of concrete instance, the report says, a member bank having capital and surplus of $200,000, therefore holding Federal Reserve Bank stock amounting to $6,000 on which it is receiving $360 under the present 6 per cent dividend arrangement, would with the addition of each 1 per cent to the dividend rate receive an additional income of $60 a year.

"If each member bank will figure out for itself the dollar-and-cents gain it would enjoy we are confident it will be agreed that the gains are small as against the economic disadvantages which can be pointed out," it concludes.

SEES HEAVY CLAIMS ON FUTURE BANKERS

American Bankers Association
Official Declares That Banking
Changes Creating Large Bank
Systems Will Call for Broader Social Viewpoints.

Larger scale group or branch banking will inevitably bring a new era of banking organization and operations to the United States and bankers will have to develop "new conceptions, new administrative methods and new economic views," Rudolf S. Hecht, Chairman of the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association, recently told the members of the American Institute of Banking.

The institute is the educational section of the association and he emphasized the point that the new era in banking demanded "that we must step up our education so that banking shall be fortified for new responsibilities."

What the Future Calls For
"We must broaden our social conception of banking," Mr. Hecht said. "Not only for the technical operations of the new banking must we fit ourselves, but both as individuals and an organized profession we must charge ourselves with serious consideration of the social problems that are involved. Already we hear murmurings and fears and doubts as to whether the changes that are coming about in banking in the extension of group and branch systems do not constitute the looming of a new financial menace, a monopolistic threat not only to the individual unit banker, but to the financial liberty of society in general. I am stating these things merely as facts that must be taken into consideration in our studies.

"Public opinion cannot be ignored by any business, least of all by banking, which is admittedly semi-public in character and is, therefore, subject to special supervision by the constituted authorities. If banking develops tendencies that give rise to public fears, we must so conduct ourselves as to reassure all doubts.

"For this is true,—that business succeeds only by serving society—that no business can permanently prosper which does not both render service to the public and at the same time convince the public that it is rendering that service. Banking, therefore, must take cognizance of what the public is saying of this new era in its development.

"It must be part of the technique of modern banking administration, whatever form our enlarged institutions take, to avoid the creation of monopolies, or even the appearance of such a centralization of financial power as to be able to exercise an undue influence over public or private finance or other lines of business. The public's right to the safeguards of fair competition must be observed.

Must Preserve Individual Initiative
"It must also be an item of management that individual initiative and opportunity shall be maintained. If America has outstripped other nations in the distribution of the benefits of its progress, it is due to the fact that there are no barriers of social caste, or business tradition against advancement for character, ability, and initiative. American business has learned that it serves itself best by encouraging by every practical means individual ambition and initiative, and hurts itself most by repressing or neglecting them. Competition for efficiency, both within an organization and between organizations, will prevent any institution from long enduring in which maintenance of opportunity and recognition of initiative are not controlling principles of management. As heads of the greatest of our financial and industrial institutions stand men who started from the humblest of beginnings. Through all the grades of executive authority and reward stand men in positions in keeping, generally speaking, with their individual merits. I, personally, see no reason for fearing that the enlarged banking organizations which the future may hold would necessarily supply future bank employees with any less opportunity for achievement than unit banking.

"Again, a major consideration of administration in any multiple form of banking organization must be its public relations in every community it touches. Its foremost consideration must be actually and visibly to serve the economic upbuilding of that community. No system will be long tolerated whose local members work, or are suspected as working, to draw economic strength from one place to enlarge the financial power of another. The local unit bank has always been part and parcel of the communities where it lives—and no system can last which does not make it a major principle of operating technique to serve, and not exploit, the communities into whose business lives it enters."

Growth of Banking Education
DENVER, Colo.—At the American Institute of Banking convention held here last month the growth in the effort among bank employees to provide themselves with banking education was shown by the fact, as reported by one speaker, that 12 years ago the institute had 80 study chapters, today 208, and that its enrollment in the study courses had grown from 11,000 to 45,000, or an increase of over 300 per cent. The graduates number nearly 14,000. The institute is the educational section of the American Bankers Association through which bank workers are given instruction in theoretical and practical subjects relating to their business.

The Idle Stomach—Our Most Serious Unemployment Problem

By E. V. McCollum, Ph.D., Sc.D.

Author of "The Newer Knowledge of Nutrition," "Food, Nutrition and Health," etc., Professor of Bio-Chemistry, School of Hygiene and Public Health, Johns Hopkins University.

LIVING as we do nowadays on a diet consisting largely of concentrated and highly refined foods, many persons too often overlook the absolute need for a certain quantity of "indigestibles"—food that keeps the digestive tract healthfully at work and provides the excess bulk so necessary to promote well being.

It is a recognized law of Nature that the digestive tract of any creature is adapted to suit the kind of diet to which the species long has been accustomed. And in order to obtain a clear picture of the importance of roughage in the human dietary, it might be well for us to review briefly the three types of creatures—including man—that compose the animal kingdom.

First, there is the species known as herbivora, who subsist entirely upon food of vegetable origin. These have stomachs of enormous capacity, and intestines which are large enough to contain the great residues of indigestible matter which result from a diet of coarse herbage. The lining membranes of the stomach and intestines of herbivorous animals, too, are highly resistant to mechanical injury and tolerate without damage the friction of the coarse residues as they pass along the digestive tract.

Flesh-Eating Animals

Next in the scale of animal species we find the carnivora, who restrict their food solely to the flesh of other animals. In this group we find that the digestive tract is of much smaller capacity, as a result, no doubt, of long adherence to food of exclusively animal origin. Meat, glandular organs and fat, we know, are highly concentrated foods; and even a small bulk suffices to provide ample nutrients for growth and the maintenance of weight, even when much of the food consumed is burned for the performance of work or the production of heat.

While the digestive tract in these flesh-eating animals functions satisfactorily without much indigestible material on which to work, it must be remembered that the carnivora, under natural conditions, take a great deal of exercise and that the residue from their food is quite smooth in texture. Even so, many of these animals—as the dog, cat, lion and tiger—eat much bone substance, which is changed by the strong acidity of the stomach to form insoluble and fairly bulky material of a mass favorable to the mechanical functioning of the intestine, and thus makes elimination possible at a rate which is consistent with health.

E. V. McCollum

Coming now to man—the third type of species in the animal kingdom—we find that he is omnivorous. Except in the far North, where no vegetable food is available, human beings draw their nutriment from both plant and animal life. Nevertheless, man cannot eat very bulky vegetable food in any considerable quantity, because his digestive tract is of small capacity. Neither can he safely eat of the coarse vegetables, because the lining membranes of his stomach and intestines are too delicate to withstand the scraping of the coarser particles of indigestible matter without injury.

What Cooking Does

One way in which man has attempted, and with success, to eat safely the coarser root and leafy vegetables, is through softening and disintegrating the cellulose of those foods by cooking them. The cooking process not only decomposes some of their substances classed as cellulose, but makes the remainder of the food more digestible and thus averts the after distress of eating. When some of the smaller and fugitive tribes of American Indians were forced into localities in which game was scarce and food plants not abundant, they were compelled by circumstance to eat grass seed, acorns and other vegetable foods which are coarser than humans are accustomed to eat. They suffered greatly from indigestion, and doubtless injured their digestive tracts by taking cellulose which was too coarse and irritating. They had not less than a score of "grandmother" remedies for indigestion to attest these experiences.

Common knowledge tells us that indigestible things are dangerous if eaten freely; yet it is equally clear that our intestines do not function properly unless there is a certain amount of indigestible matter to distend them to the right degree, and to form a mass which is favorable for the muscular contractions of the intestine to move along with the peristaltic waves.

Between the extremes of having in the intestine too much and too coarse cellulose on the one hand, and too little indigestible bulky matter on the other, lies the happy medium which is favorable both to comfort and health. There are many kinds of cellulose in different vegetable products. It forms the framework and fibers of plants, the walls of vegetable cells and the coverings of seeds. In most of its forms, cellulose is insoluble in boiling water; and it is not acted upon by any of the digestive juices, though certain kinds of bacteria are capable of fermenting and digesting the cellulose of certain plants.

Bran is probably the form of cellulose which has been most discussed in connection with the improvement of intestinal hygiene through facilitating elimination. There is good reason for believing, however, that when bran is eaten exclusively for promoting intestinal hygiene, it generally is eaten too freely. If properly softened through cooking, and taken in amounts no greater than are afforded by eating the whole cereal as a breakfast food, it is undoubtedly an excellent source of cellulose.

What has been said of wheat bran and its benefits is even more particularly true of the cellulose of the rice kernel. Rice is the principal cereal grain in the dietary of more than half the human race. Those who have been brought up on a diet constantly containing rice like it better than any other cereal. We have, in America, long been accustomed to eating small amounts of rice occasionally, but we generally never have eaten it as freely as we have either wheat or corn.

Cellulose of Rice Softest
The cellulose of the corn kernel is considerably more difficult to digest and more irritating than the cellulose of either wheat or rice. Of the three, the cellulose of rice is the softest and smoothest; and for regulating the elimination of children, or of adults with delicate digestive systems, it is almost ideal as a source of bulky matter.

A few faddists doubtless eat too much of cellulose-rich foods, particularly green leafy vegetables. While we never should become extremists about any feature of the diet, it is a fact that the modern food regimen often is lacking in sufficient cellulose, and this matter of an idle stomach and digestive tract is one of the most serious unemployment problems that confronts the human race today.

LIVING UP TO AN IDEAL—Taft, Calif., Petroleum Press

The telephone industry has made an amazing record in improving and broadening its service to the public, and at the same time lowering rates.

Within three years four major reductions have been made in long distance rates which are saving the public almost $15,000,000 annually. The last of those reductions went into effect January first.

Thus the industry lives up to its motto: To provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost. Today we can talk to almost any great country in the world. Long distance calls from one corner of the United States to another are commonplace. In a fraction of a second a voice is carried thousands of miles, unaffected by any physical obstacle. The telephone has made social and diplomatic, as well as industrial history.

ARMLESS BOATMAN PROVIDED WITH ODD TELEPHONE DEVICE

John Johnson of Beverly Harbor, Mass., Talking by Means of Specially Designed Apparatus.

JOHN JOHNSON, who lost both of his arms in a railroad accident some years ago, has a boat-house at Beverly Harbor, Mass. He has lots of customers who call up to reserve boats, and often fishermen who stay out after mealtime and wish to call their homes to make sure their dinners will be kept ready for them. So John's telephone is quite busy.

When the order came in for a telephone at Johnson's boathouse, Bill Green, installation foreman at Salem, found it quite a problem to supply service for a man with no arms. He finally devised an iron bracket to hold the receiver close to the user's ear when speaking into the transmitter, and instead of the hook switch he installed a switch which is operated by the foot while talking. The illustration shows Mr. Johnson at his telephone.

Bringing The Old Swimming Pool Up To Date

For some years Shedd's pond has been used as a swimming pool by Midlothianites.

Although located on private property, it has been taken over by the people. Now that a park site has been acquired in Robertson's subdivision, it is time to take steps to preserve this spot—so ideally suited for a park—for public use in years to come.

It is understood that this property has been offered to the village if certain assessments are paid. While the village is not now in condition to take on more debts, yet surely some means can be found to acquire it.

Meanwhile there are no locker and toilet facilities on the spot. The Legion, as part of its program for village betterment, has asked for donations to provide for these needs. When suitable buildings are provided, they promise to see that they are locked at dark every evening.

Citizens with a sense of civic pride will be glad, we feel sure, to help this cause along. The parks committee of the Legion, headed by Clarence Zuchelkowsky, will be glad to receive any contribution.

A SQUARE DEAL

Midlothian merchants have shown themselves extremely willing to contribute to all sorts of public enterprises. But the organizations benefited have not always been so anxious to help the local business man, according to reports.

To give the local merchant a square deal, whenever possible the supplies purchased by the organizations should come through our business man. Reciprocity will mean good will all around.

Oak Forest

Epworth League

At this season of graduations, promotions, etc., the Oak Forest Epworth League is glad to announce that it too has been studying hard this past year and is now ready to give you its A B C's.

"A" is for achievement, and, according to one writer, "Achievement is the hard-headed, common-sense test of the value of anything." Let me tell you a little of what our Epworth League has achieved this year.

It has taken in fourteen new members, making a total membership, active and associate, of 38, held 52 helpful devotional meetings, and 21 social meetings. It has become better acquainted with our yellow, black and red brothers through the splendid addresses of natives from other lands, cared for the sick and needy in the community, and put on two plays: "An Old Fashioned Mother" - being put on seven times - and "Neighbors" - played twice. It has contributed toward the church building fund, current expenses, drilling of the church well and kitchen supplies. Also it presented to the church a dozen new song books and, in addition to its "Twenty-four Hour Day" dues, contributed something over $21.00 to missions.

"B" is for a Bigger and Better League and that is what we plan to make ours during the new year, commencing June 1st.

"C" stands for the development of Christian Character - the real aim and purpose of the League.

We could go right on down thru the alphabet, but due to space we will call attention to just one more letter - "M".

"M" stands for our Motto, "Look Up, Lift Up." Also for the new members we hope to gain this year, and if you are a young person, and not already a member, we invite you to be one of them.

Epworth League meets every Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

L. C. STEPHENS, Dist. Mgr. Joliet, Ill. Phone 1250

Calling attention to the fact that any legislation to give Chicago and Cook county speedy financial relief must be passed by June 30 or be enacted by a two-thirds vote of the legislature, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson urged each member of the general assembly faithfully to attend the remaining sessions of the special session.

"The financial plight of the city of Chicago, the county of Cook and other governing bodies within that county is well known. The desirability of submitting to referendum at the November election this year an amendment to modernize the revenue article of the constitution is generally admitted. It is, therefore, with the greatest earnestness, that I urge all members of the general assembly to attend regularly the remaining sessions of the legislature, so that its full force may be exerted for completion of this work by June 30," Governor Emmerson concluded.

The state health department has issued a statement pointing out that dry weather, coupled with a great increase in the use of sewer facilities, has conspired to add heavily to stream pollution throughout the state. Another factor in the increased volume of stream pollution is the inadequate operation of many sewage treatment plants. "This increases the danger of infection to people who use the streams for bathing purposes and it makes necessary great efficiency on the part of public water supply systems which depend upon the stream for a source. No water from the streams should be used by individuals for drinking purposes without boiling," the statement read.

Illinois commission on election laws will hold three down-state public meetings during the week beginning June 23. The first meeting will be held in the ball room of the Orlando hotel, Decatur, Wednesday, June 25, with the first session beginning at 10:00 a. m., and another session from 2:00 p. m. to 4:00 p. m. District and county officials, party leaders, citizens' clubs, chambers of commerce, city officials, newspaper editors, representatives of the Woman's Voters' league, and any other citizens interested are invited to attend and participate in the proceedings.

Two sessions will be held at the Hotel Emmerson in Mt. Vernon on Thursday, June 26, and two sessions in the Broadview hotel in East St. Louis on Friday, June 27, beginning at 10:00 a. m. and 2:00 p. m.

The commission on election laws was appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, under an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, entitled: "An act to create a temporary commission to investigate the advisability or need of a general revision of the laws relating to election, to make recommendations relating thereto, to draft any proposed legislation and making an appropriation therefor," approved June 14, 1929.

The commissioners are: Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, county judge of Cook county, chairman; Judge James S. Baldwin, judge of the circuit court, Decatur; Maj. Gen. Milton J. Foreman, Chicago.

Seeking to reduce the upkeep cost of warning signs at grade crossings, the state highway department is experimenting with a type made of rubber, to replace the customary diagonal stripes of black and white paint, on the pavement.

In accordance with plans worked out at the request of Director H. H. Cleveland of the department of public works and buildings, and Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, two signs are set up in each lane of traffic approaching the test crossings. At a point 400 feet from the rail, the first sign is inscribed, "SLOW—R. R. CROSSING." At 200 feet from the crossing, the second warning reads, "DANGER—R. R. CROSSING."

The licensed race tracks in operation in Illinois will pay the state in excess of $800,000 this year. This is based upon the proposed racing schedule for the entire season, as filed with the director of agriculture and upon the assumption that the patronage will compare favorably with that of 1929. For the biennium ending June 30, 1931, the legislature in 1929 approved the following appropriations from this fund: for state aid to county and other agricultural fairs, $520,000; for premiums to be paid by the state fairs of 1929 and 1930, $270,000 and for state aid by way of premium reimbursements to the county 4-H clubs, $80,000.

The Illinois Agricultural association will hold its 1931 convention in Springfield, January 28, 29 and 30.

The Buy-Illinois-Products commission has announced that it will hold an Illinois Products exposition in connection with the Illinois state fair at Springfield, August 16-23. Chairman Eugene D. Funk has invited every class of Illinois industry to display its goods at this exposition.

The total coal production of Illinois mines for the first five months of this year was 22,476,299 tons, according to a report issued by John G. Millhouse, director of the department of mines and minerals.

The Egyptian club will hold its annual picnic Saturday, July 12, at 6:00 p. m., in Lincoln park, Springfield. The speakers for the evening will be Hon. Harry G. Wright, state senator, De Kalb, and Hon. S. J. Stannard, former directors of agriculture. Both Senator Wright and Mr. Stannard are former directors of agriculture. Both are well known throughout the state. Other features of the evening will be readings, music and games.

This picnic is for all former southern Illinois residents now residing in this locality and all are cordially invited to come with well filled baskets of good old southern Illinois cooked food.

The following committees are in charge of arrangements: Program committee, S. L. Legred, chairman; Dr. R. R. Blanchard, Charles Russell, Roy Glebe Hill, Dr. E. B. Ratliff. Reception committee: H. L. Williamson, chairman; H. C. Gott, Francis G. Blair, H. D. Hawk, A. C. Millsbaugh, A. C. Margrave, Mrs. R. E. Hagebusch. Nominating committee: R. E. Hagebusch, chairman; G. H. Harmon, J. B. Newman.

Bids on 140.52 miles of paving, 21.68 miles of grading, several grade separation projects, and the construction of numerous bridges, will be received on July 9, by the state highway department, Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets announced recently. The cost of the projects is estimated at $5,500,000.

The United States and Illinois departments of agriculture have united forces for the eradication of the common barberry bush as a menace to wheat production. Federal department field men, under the direction of Robert W. Bills of the United States Department of Agriculture, and eight representatives of the division of plant industry, under the supervision of Superintendent Phil S. Haner, have been assigned for points in southern Illinois to search out the plants and effect their destruction. Following the investigation in the southern counties, the forces will recheck the northern territory to determine the effect of eradication work conducted there two years ago.

Plans for the enrollment of a maximum of 322 Illinois boys between fifteen and twenty-one years of age, half from cities and half from rural communities, were announced recently by the commission in charge of the Illinois state fair boys' school. Geographic distribution of the privilege to enter is based upon the population of the counties.

Appointment of Dr. Charles F. Read, Chicago, as managing officer of the Elgin State hospital, succeeding Dr. Ralph G. Hinton, effective July 1, has been announced by Director Rodney H. Brandon of the department of public welfare. Doctor Hinton will go to the new state hospital at Manteno, as managing officer.

The executive committee of the Illinois Tuberculosis association at a recent meeting in Springfield, passed a resolution favoring state legislation to provide a tuberculosis sanitarium for southern Illinois.

Statistics show that the number of deaths due to tuberculosis in that section is greater than the average, while there are now in existence only two small sanitariums, one at Carroll and one at Palestine. The state of Illinois at the present time provides no facilities for the treatment of tuberculosis. All institutions are maintained by county or private funds.

The state association plans to conduct a survey covering death rates, living, school and sanitary conditions, and tax rates; with a view to presenting the results to the legislature when it convenes this fall. The survey is to be conducted under the direction of Wellington P. Shahan, Springfield, executive secretary.

County fair officials of Illinois have been notified to file with the department of agriculture, prior to July 1, their annual statements of proposed premium offerings for their 1930 fairs. If the fairs of 1930 pay out as much in premiums as they did in 1929, the records indicate that the fund will be inadequate, making it necessary to pro-rate it among the fairs.

With this issue we begin the publication of a series of biographies of the men whose names appear on the frieze on the outside walls of the Centennial building. Each one performed a distinct service to the state, and their identities are matters of interest to every Illinois citizen. We shall take first those whose names appear on the north side of the building.

John Mason Peck, clergyman and educator, was born in Litchfield, Conn., October 31, 1789, and died at Rock Spring, St. Clair county, Illinois, March 15, 1858. Mr. Peck established Rock Spring seminary in St. Clair county, Illinois, in 1826; out of this grew Shurtleff college, Upper Alton, Ill. No man exerted a larger influence for good and the advancement of the cause of education among the pioneer citizens of all classes in Illinois.

H. L. Williamson, superintendent of the division of printing, has announced the successful bidders for furnishing the various classes of printing, binding, lithographing, stationery and type-writer supplies to be used by the general assembly, state officers, departments and institutions for one year.

Bids were received, publicly opened and read on June 4 in the office of Director Henry H. Kohn of the department of purchases and construction. These were tabulated and modern tests made of the samples submitted.

Lesson for June 29

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Making Jesus Known.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Believing in Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Shall I do with Jesus?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of Christian Discipleship.

The plan of review must always be determined by the teacher in the light of the grade of the school and the aptitudes of the pupils. For senior and adult classes the best method will be to recall that all the lessons of the quarter are from the book of Matthew, which has as its theme Jesus Christ, the Messiah, King, and His Kingdom, and to present each lesson in its relation to this central purpose. The lessons have a threefold unity, namely, one book, one theme, one person.

Lesson for April 6. To prepare the disciples for the dark hour of the cross, Jesus sought to lead them to a clear apprehension of His purpose and mission. After Peter's confession of Him as the Messiah, Jesus showed to the disciples that He must come into His place of triumph through the tragedy of the cross.

Lesson for April 13. The greatest in the kingdom are those who possess childlike humility. The condition of entrance into the kingdom is true conversion, or birth from above.

Lesson for April 20. In this lesson we have divine instruction as to behavior in case of ill-treatment. Those who are Christlike shall suffer persecution. Those who have entered the kingdom by birth from above—those who have received forgiveness from God—will forgive their fellows.

Lesson for April 27. Riches are deceitful. Possessors thereof are prone to put their trust in them. It is most difficult for those who are rich to give place to spiritual things.

Lesson for May 4. Those who would be greatest in the kingdom should, like Christ the King, take the place of self-abasement. In love, Christ gave Himself for others. He substituted "the greatness of love for the love of greatness."

Lesson for May 11. To the nation which rejected Jesus as King and was endeavoring to kill Him, at the appointed time, in the councils of God, He officially presented Himself as King, in fulfillment of prophecy.

Lesson for May 18. Under the figure of a marriage, Jesus set forth the privileges and benefits of the kingdom. He used marriage, the highest ideal of love and friendship known to man, to show the benefits of the kingdom.

Lesson for May 25. In the Olivet discourse Jesus outlined the events in the world to take place in the interval between His crucifixion and His second coming. The parable of the ten virgins shows the right behavior of believers in this present age in view of the coming of the Lord.

Lesson for June 1. By talents is meant whatever faculties and powers one possesses as God's gifts, such as physical strength, reason, knowledge, speech, song, or money. All these should be employed so as to honor God who gave them. A reckoning time is coming when account shall be rendered for their use. This will be at Christ's second coming.

Lesson for June 8. Mary of Bethany, because of her keen apprehension, saw that the Lord's body would be broken and that His precious life would go out at a time when no one could lovingly minister to Him. She therefore anointed Him as against that dread day. When the disciples criticized her act, she was defended by Jesus.

Lesson for June 15.—Jesus did not die as a martyr or as an example, but to make an atonement for man's sin. The supreme value of the lessons for the quarter centers in the cross. Teachers, it is not a matter of getting your children to learn the lessons of a great teacher, but to induce them to have faith in Christ's sacrificial death.

Lesson for June 22. The resurrection of Jesus demonstrated His Messiahship and deity. The command of Jesus to preach the gospel in all the world is backed by His resurrection power.

The Oil of Joy

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people, and the old are hungrier for love than for bread, and the oil of joy is very cheap, and if you can help the poor on with the garment of praise, it will be better for them than blankets.—Henry Drummond.

A Moral Pivot

The Hindu professor of modern history in a South India college said to me: "My study of modern history has shown me that there is a Moral Pivot in the world today, and that the best life of both East and West is more and more revolving about that center—that Moral Pivoting is the person of Jesus Christ."—E. Stanley Jones.

Force of Character Necessary

The most brilliant qualities become useless when they are not sustained by force of character.—Segur.

The Two Prize Babies

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

"MISS LORIMER, pray be seated," said George Taylor, the city editor, with mock ceremony. "That chair has only three good legs, but if you are careful it will do you do harm."

Myrtle Lorimer, sitting cautiously on the wobbly chair in the city editor's small cubicle, tried to hide a smile. "You are unkind to make fun of me," she complained.

"Here's the trick," Taylor said. "Next week is to be 'Boost Toronto Week,' and we're planning to come out big for it. It pleases the advertisers. Among other things that the celebration committee is going to pull is a baby contest. Old gag, but every one likes that sort of thing. Now, I want a page or maybe two devoted to baby contests of the past. There have been eight or ten of them here in the past. You can find out about that in files of the paper. Twenty-five years ago they had their first baby contest here in Toronto. The chairman of the celebration committee was telling me, and I want you to find out the names of the prize babies. Trace them down and get an interview. Give 'em a big boost—show the world that prize babies in Toronto make good. Get photographs—baby photographs and up-to-date photographs."

George Taylor looked up and saw to his surprise that Myrtle Lorimer was looking both annoyed and embarrassed. "I'd rather not—" she stammered.

"What next?" he asked with ill-hidden annoyance, then coaxingly, "you know, girl, that sort of stuff is just your line. No one on the staff could do it half so well. I didn't expect you'd pull any temperamental stuff when I asked you."

Myrtle laughed, but it was a cheerless little laugh. "Don't you see how hard it would be for me?" she asked. "I'm just twenty-five years and a half old. I was entered in that baby contest—and I was one of the prize babies."

"Not at all," cried George Taylor, waxing interested. "You don't have to sign the article. All you have to do is to tell the story and get interviews. You can get a dandy interview with yourself—give yourself a good boost and that's good publicity for the paper."

"Oh, but Mr. Taylor," protested Myrtle with tears welling into her pretty gray eyes. "If you only knew now I hate to do it."

"Well, if you're going to put your own personal feelings ahead of the good of the Banner then you're not the sort of newspaper woman I thought you were," said George.

Myrtle blinked back a tear or two and gave George Taylor a quick glance that he did not soon forget. "You are my superior, Mr. Taylor," she said. "You know I could never be guilty of insubordination—to you—but it's hard."

Nothing in Myrtle's life had been any harder than that assignment. But Mr. Taylor had said she was showing the right spirit. She wanted his approval—wanted it as she had seldom wanted anything in her life. She spent the next day getting the interview with herself in condition, digging out old baby pictures and having new pictures taken. She showed the result of her work to George Taylor. His praise made it all worth while.

They met the next night, not at the office, but at the quiet hotel restaurant, where they had agreed to meet. George Taylor thought he had never seen Myrtle looking half so pretty as she did when he saw her waiting for him in the hotel lobby. But then he had never seen her away from the newspaper offices.

"You weren't late, I was early," she told him to relieve any possible concern. "I was so impatient to—to see you."

"That's good of you," stammered George. "But you couldn't have been half as impatient as I have been—"

"Wait till I tell you," laughed Myrtle. Then they made their way into the quiet old-fashioned dining room.

"You see I traced the identity of the other prize baby today," she said. "It was just a matter of looking over old files of newspapers. The Banner wasn't in existence then and I had to go into the vaults to get the old files of the Standard. But I found the right papers, and saw a most amusing account of myself at six months. There were two prizes—one for a girl and one for a boy. The boy was nine months old and his name was—George Taylor."

For a full minute George Taylor sat looking at Myrtle Lorimer across the table. Then he chuckled.

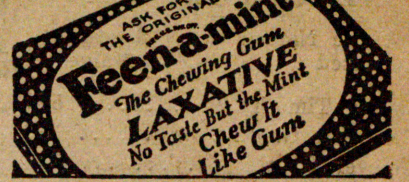

"Let's call it all off," he said at length. "I know I'm a coward. I'm not showing the right spirit, and you did. But I never could stand the ragging I'd get if I were played up as a prize baby. It would be different with a girl. But we won't either of us appear. We'll think of some other scheme. No, it wouldn't do, Myrtle—it wouldn't do at all—to have our pictures played up that way—you and I—when—when—some time—soon I hope—our names might be mentioned in some other connection. You know, I mean—"

"What do you mean?" smiled Myrtle.

"I mean I love you, Myrtle," said George. "I want you to marry me—and you know you said you couldn't be guilty of insubordination."

"Not to you," said Myrtle.

CHAPTER IX

The Chase Begins

To the considerable amusement of Joshua Inglepin, Fellowes was obliged to rescue Tom and Cuffee from a ring of admiring idlers who crowded the taproom of the Washington hotel to watch the negro twisting horseshoes and breaking bricks in his great hands, and listen to Tom's hair-raising yarns. Cuffee had been so delighted with the admiration he aroused that he forgot his charge to restrict Tom's drinking, with the result that Mr. Grogan was a good bit more than three sheets in the wind.

"D'you want to go with me as bosun in the Centurion privateer?" demanded Fellowes.

"Boshun?"

"That's what I said. But I won't have a drunkard piping my fo'c's'le."

Cuffee, who had been humbly apologetic over his dereliction from duty, was unable to confine his enthusiasm at this news.

"To ketch him ship wid Long Tom, Mars'r Fellowes?" he cried, eyes shining.

"Yes, but her gunner is going to be a man I can depend on. Frankly, I'm at a loss what to do with you two."

"Tush," said the merchant, "we'll send 'em to Christian Bergh. He can rig hammocks for them aboard the brig. Here, Tom, give this line to Mr. Bergh. He'll take care of you. And now, by your leave, Captain, we'll have a bite of dinner, and after wait upon his excellency."

Fellowes' head was jammed with an incoherent stream of thoughts as he walked beside the merchant under the weighed, green boughs of the tulip trees. His mind was concentrated upon the future. He was planning the berthing of one hundred and fifty men, estimating the quantities of powder and shot for great guns and small, the proportion of boarding-pikes to cutlasses, of pistols to muskets, designing special broadside ports for the Long Tom in either bulwark, so that by yawing in flight the Centurion might sting a pursuer to the utmost.

He scarcely heard Joshua Inglepin's conversation; his responses were mechanical. Eating his food, drinking the choice Madeira, it was always the same: Joshua's voice, declaring positively, his own measured responses, the turgid stream of his thoughts.

They left the house and walked down Broadway. In Bowling Green they were challenged by a picket, but Joshua's name passed them inside the grounds of Government house, and they ascended the wide stairs of the portico among a procession of aides-de-camp and politicians. A short wait, then, and they were ushered into the presence of Governor Tompkins.

The governor was both courteous and interested.

"Captain Fellowes? Ah, yes, to be sure. Knew your father well, sir. A shame he left the legislature, but he was determined for diplomacy. Well, well! And you have been in the enemy's hands? Flogged, b'gad! And there are Federalists who would assure the country that no honest Americans have been pressed and there's not such a tool as the cat in the British fleet! But tell me your story, sir."

He listened keenly, with an occasional interjection, drawing out Joshua's theories, and after his callers had concluded delivered instant judgment.

"Your lawyer friend was in the right, Captain Fellowes. We could never maintain your evidence in judicial proceedings, civil or military. Moreover, 'twould be bad politics to attempt it, for the Federalists would make capital out of our efforts. A prosecution, d'you see? A partisan attack upon a leader of their faction. No, no, 'twouldn't do. 'Twouldn't do at all, sir. But don't think I'm belittling the value of your information. Circumstantially, it bears out evidence we have been accumulating this past twelve-month. The fact is, gentlemen, New England is rotten with intrigue against the national government. There's a move afoot now to summon a convention of delegates of the dissatisfied states to take action to secure a peace. There's open talk of secession."

He was silent for some minutes.

"Joshua, you have the right idea," he decided at last. "This is a matter for private enterprise. But—are you certain you wish to bring your brother to justice? Should the evidence Captain Fellowes seeks come to light, 'twould be a hanging job, my friend."

Joshua Inglepin's features contorted spasmodically, with such a congestion of blood that Fellowes wondered if he ought to loosen the man's stock. But Joshua waved him away.

"I'm—all right," Passion throbbed in the merchant's voice. "Damme, Governor, who should bring my brother to justice, if not I? Isn't he a reproach to my name?"

"Yet, after all, your brother," the governor reminded him. "And there is the young lady. I fear, gentlemen, if the affair is as black as 'tis painted—"

Joshua Inglepin fairly shouted at Fellowes:

"Well, Captain, what have we to say to that? Shall we shrink from our task because a woman is concerned with it?"

Fellowes looked from one to the other, icily aloof.

"I have settled that issue with Mr. Inglepin," he said quietly. "Miss Inglepin must take her chance. She is not—" he struggled for the right phrase, anxious neither to overblame nor excuse—"a loyal American, your excellency."

"Forgive me, captain, if I intrude upon your personal affairs," replied the governor. "But let me ask again: are you sure you will not regret your participation? Hatred is a bitter medicine."

"Not so bitter," Joshua spoke up fiercely. "A man hates for the satisfaction of it! There's zest in a right, proper hatred. Take Ben. I hate him because he's disloyal. I hate him because he's my brother. I hate him because he's a Federalist. And I might go on indefinitely at the same rate. If I can live to see Ben ruined, I'll die happy. Happy, by G—d, sir! Eh, Fellowes?"

"I have no expectation of happiness," Fellowes answered wearily. "But we wander from the point of our visit. Your excellency has not said you'll help us."

"By all means in my power," the governor returned promptly. "The Secret Service shall be instructed to protect you, and report every move of these people." He paused. "I suppose you'll wish to have the young lady watched?"

"She must take her chance with the others," Fellowes insisted. "We'll play no favorites, sir."

Joshua Inglepin clipped his arm, savagely peremptory.

"Aye, no favorites, damme," rasped the merchant. "You can't afford 'em when you hate, Fellowes. I know!"

An aide knocked at the door.

"General Scott is arrived from the Niagara frontier, your excellency," he announced.

"Ah," exclaimed the governor. "In that case, I must ask you to excuse me, gentlemen. But be assured of my sympathy in your undertakings." He hesitated. "My sympathy, gentlemen, and my pity," he added earnestly.

Outside on the steps of the portico, Joshua Inglepin clutched Fellowes' arm again.

"Don't heed the governor's twaddle," he urged in his jerky, impatient speech. "He means well, but he doesn't know. How could he? How could anyone, who hasn't learned to hate? Pah! We'll show 'em, Fellowes. We'll show 'em, damme!"

Fellowes experienced a slight inclination to nausea, and asked himself if Joshua's hysterical assertiveness wasn't perhaps, a reaction from the same cause. He hated, he hated with his whole being. But there was no satisfaction in it, despite Joshua's claim. It was, on the contrary, rather debasing.

There was much to be done in fitting the Centurion for sea, but the easiest job of all was collecting a crew. Nimrod Sophor, with Paris Eaches, Joe Doak and a dozen more Babylonians posted into town by Jeff Riggle's coach as soon as the news trickled through the pine forests down the South shore, and were all enrolled in the marine guard, and put

Dire Punishment for Man "Mute of Malice"

"Mute of malice" is a legal term of considerable antiquity, and applies to prisoners who on being arranged in court refuse to plead. In a recent Dublin case, counsel said that to seek a verdict of this kind nowadays was only an "absurd formality."

But once it was not so. Then penalty was terribly severe. Here is an instance as late as 1740. A highwayman, who pretended to be dumb and refused to plead at Kilkenny assizes, was tried as to whether he was "mute and lunatic by the hand of God or willfully so." On being found "mute of malice," he was sentenced to be pressed to death, a decree which was carried out in the market place.

"As the weights were heaping on the wretched man" (says an account) "he to assisting Cuffee in mounting the battery and overhauling the small arms. A Marblehead man named Spencer, who had left his home-port in disgust at New England's Federalist proclivities, was accepted as first lieutenant, and a low-voiced Virginian, Henry Breed, qualified as second. For surgeon Fellowes picked a city doctor, Aloysius O'Shaughnessy, red-headed son of a surgeon in Willett's regiment of the old New York Line.

The minor ratings were selected from some five hundred applicants, for the shipping trade was hamstrung, and employment in a fast heavy-armed privateer was infinitely preferable to enlistment in the regular army or militia, notwithstanding bounties and land-warrants freely offered as inducements to recruits. Fellowes took only healthy, seasoned men. When the brig hauled out of her slip, and anchored in the stream, she mustered the choicest crew, mariners said, that ever had sailed from New York.

Fellowes was imperturbably satisfied, and Joshua never tired of his visits of inspection. "I wish to God Ben would make up his mind, and sail," he'd exclaim, scowling over the side at the stumpy hull of the True Bounty, lying a quarter mile nearer Governors island. "Tis vastly annoying, this delay."

Fellowes, himself worn by the tension, could only counsel patience.

"We're ready, Mr. Inglepin. The moment he slips his cable, we'll be after him."

And Joshua would sigh gustily, his ruddy features suddenly ugly with the passion that stewed in his soul.

"If we might only seize him when he sails! But doubtless he'd destroy aught damaging to his interest."

"Doubtless," Fellowes agreed curtly. And added as curtly: "And forget not you'll watch for us until I've brought the Badger to action, aye, if it takes a year."

Strangely, Joshua never resented such reminders.

"To be sure, to be sure," he'd assent. "I mustn't be selfish. You have Collishaw to reckon with, too. And you do well to hate thoroughly, captain. You'll never regret it."

So he'd go over to his wherry, piped by Tom and his mates, like an admiral into his barge.

Summer waned into fall and the waterfront speculated freely on the conjunction of circumstances that kept the two Inglepin ships in port. So did Ben and his friends. The Secret Service reports that came to Joshua every few days were full of such passages as this:

"Mr. Inglepin had with him over the Thursday Senator Pickering of Massachusetts. They attended a meeting at the Bank Coffee house in the evening. Higgins, the waiter, says there was a deal of talk of secession, but mostly of the objective of Mr. Joshua Inglepin's new privateer brig. Mr. Benjamin assured the gentlemen he'd give the d—d rascals the slip."

Another time Mr. Daniel Webster, a young, fiery representative in congress from New Hampshire, and Mr. George Herbert were cited as having conducted an animated discussion at Ben's dinner table. "Curse this government," cried Mr. Herbert. "At six days' notice I'd march for Washington, and swear upon the altar not to return until Madison was buried beneath the ruins of the capital." A sentiment which Mr. Webster applauded. "This is no longer a free government," said he. "The Constitution is foully libeled. There is growing up in Washington a fabric of despotism. We must take measures, gentlemen, desperate measures if need be."

Finally, in September, when the fall gales began to blow in earnest, the True Bounty loaded a cargo of barreled flour, salt fish, and sundries, and Ben Inglepin visited the custom house in person and took out clearance papers for Cadiz.

Joshua foamed with rage when he heard this. "The impertinence of it," he fumed. "The d—n feller's been trading with the enemy. Aye, and if the truth be known, he is, now, Cadiz! H—l, Fellowes, there are roads from Cadiz to Wellington's front. Cadiz! Why not Southampton, and be done with it?"

Joshua made a nuisance of himself occasionally, but it was he who fetched the first warning of the True Bounty's sailing.

The day had been overcast, with light airs quartering from south to east. Fellowes was sitting at supper in the main cabin, solitary by choice, when a thump sounded overhead, and Joshua pelted through the companionway.

WIDE RIBBON SASH IS BACK; BEACH MILLINERY NEW TOPIC

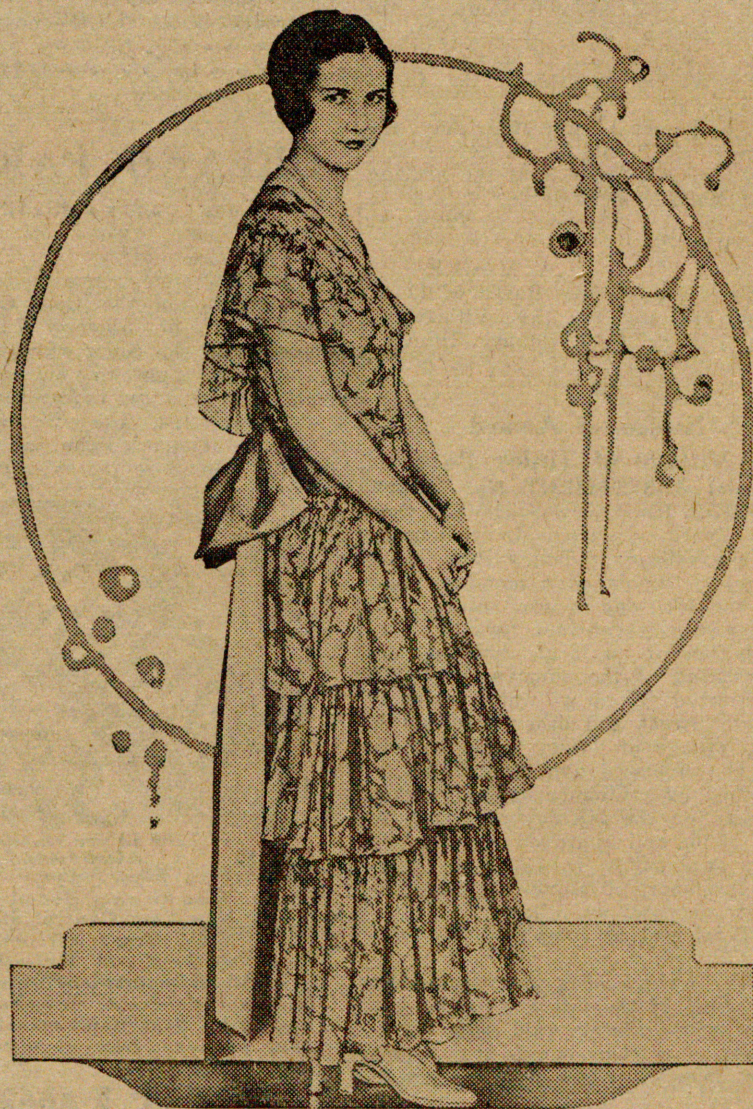

GRACEFUL berths and capelets, much from frou and flouncing of skirts, wide ribbon sashes tied at the waistline, no, this is not quoting from great grandmamma's diary nor is it an extract from Godey's Ladies' Book—simply an enumeration of style "as is" at this very moment.

Twentieth century moderns turning to the quaint past for inspiration, is exactly what is going on in the world of fashion today—successfully too! The venture is not without its thrills, opaline rose on the other, is enchanting, likewise pale green with maize or baby blue with pink.

For Wear at the Beach.

Beach millinery presents a new challenge to designers to do and to dare this season. In matter of brims the spirit is to "keep on keeping on" until the limit in width is attained. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that there is no limit when it comes to dimensions, for the

A Love of a Frock.

Fancy wearing lace mitts, and "sunshade" hats and broad ribbon sashes! Well, for one thing they are ever so flattering and prettily feminizing, we're finding that out more and more as summer comes on apace. There's the model in the picture for proof. A love of a frock this, made of bemberg chiffon in a perfectly gorgeous patterning which silhouettes yellow tulips against a flame colored ground. The sash repeats the coloring of the tulips.

Those flounces! Quaint are they not? Modern, too! Ruffles wide, narrow, single or ensuite are flourishing throughout the summer mode. It is really going to be a season of many ruffles, around little capes as you see in the picture, up and down and around skirts, frilling short sleeves. Anywhere ruffles can find the merest excuse to lodge, that will they do, this season.

In regard to this matter of ribbon sashes they are being revived in all their original quaintness and picturesque. The very wide sash, as wider the brim the smarter the beach hat.

Not only as a matter of protection, for milady's sunshade or parasol serves no better, are these hats of enormous brims winning the favor of by-the-sea vacationists, but from a pictorial standpoint they are injecting a note of breath-taking novelty into the beach style parade.

Huge hats of straw, sometimes very fine, such as milan or hemp, sometimes very coarse, as is the new lightweight novelty straw, which is making its debut late in the season, take on multi colorings—that is, alternating sections are in various bright lines. These straw hats of many colors are worn either drooping like a canopy almost hiding the face, or their enormous brims are thrown back or blown by the wind in a dashing manner (see hat to right in lower picture).

Beach hats made of linen in pastel shades are quite the thing this season. The enormous brims of these easy-to-laundry chapeaux are draped illustrated, fits into the scheme of things feminine and lovely most pleasingly. Perhaps, however, no more so than the narrower ribbon (preferably moire or belting) in pastel colors, the same brought about the waist neatly to the side front where it develops into flat loops and streamers, perhaps caught with a prim tiny bouquet!

Ruffled gowns of chiffon, or flowered, are greatly enhanced with the cunning sashes and ribbon belts now so modish. The broader sashes are mostly of very wide soft satin or taffeta ribbon. Two-faced satin sashes, say orchid on one side and larkspur blue or

The young woman posing to the left in the illustration is wearing a wide-brimmed straw hat in pale green to harmonize with her voguish beach ensemble. This very charming costume makes elegance its outstanding note rather than flashiness. The three-quarter length jacket and extremely wide trousers are of a lustrous tricot-weave fabric made of bemberg (a fiber from which fabrics are woven) using two shades, a medium and very light.

WAYS WITH SALMON

As salmon fresh or canned may be found in most markets, it is enjoyed and served freely.

Creole Salmon.—To can of flaked salmon or its equivalent in fresh cooked fish add the following: Two tablespoonfuls of fat, one chopped onion, one green paper and one-half of a pimento chopped; cook five minutes then add a half cupful of strained tomato, heat with the salmon and serve on a hot platter with rice for a border.

Salmon Loaf.—Take one cupful of salmon, three-fourths cupfuls of crumbs, the juice of half a lemon, four tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, pepper to season and add a tablespoonful of finely minced parsley. Mix all together, adding the well beaten whites last. Steam in a buttered mold for one-half hour. Serve with a white sauce to which three tablespoonfuls of chopped pimento have been added; chives or green onion tops finely minced may be used.

Salmon Entree.—Remove the stems and scoop out the centers of six large ripe tomatoes. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper and chill well. Steam or cook one pound of salmon until tender, then flake it. To the flaked salmon add three tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise and mix well. Fill the tomato cups with the salmon mixture, piling it well. Top each with one-half cupful of cream that has been whipped and mixed with four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise. Sprinkle three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped pistachio nuts over the top and serve.

Creamed Salmon.—Melt six tablespoonfuls of butter, add six tablespoonfuls of flour, three cupfuls of milk, and when nicely blended add a teaspoonful of grated onion or onion juice and one and one-half cupfuls of flaked salmon. Heat well and serve with a generous sprinkling of minced parsley. Serve on hot buttered toast fingers.

Clam, Corn Chowder.—Steam two quarts of clams in the shells in four cupfuls of water, remove them from the shells, drain and chop them. Cook three slices of bacon or fat salt pork cut into dice until crisp; add two green peppers seeded and chopped and four cupfuls of the clam broth. Cook ten minutes, add the clams and one pint of fresh sweet corn; season with salt and pepper, cook five to eight minutes and serve.

FISH AND SHELL FISH DISHES

Fish and shell fish are two of our most extensive sources of food, and in some form are found in almost all parts of our country. Where it is possible to get the fresh fish, one may always feel sure of a delightful dish, and even canned fish and shell fish are to be prized.

Deviled Clams.—Take 25 fresh or canned clams. If fresh, chop the hard portions and cook slowly for ten minutes in three tablespoonfuls of butter and add one minced pepper and onion. Now add one-half pound of sliced mushrooms and cook three minutes. Add one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of celery seed and four tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook until smooth, adding two cupfuls of milk very gradually. Now add the soft parts of the crabs or clams and pour into buttered ramekins. Cover with well-buttered crumbs and bake until brown.

Scallop Croquettes.—Wash one quart of scallops in salt water and drain. Pour boiling water over them, add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, let stand for two minutes, then drain. Wipe dry, season and roll in cracker crumbs. Lay the scallops close together in a shallow pan. Cut one-fourth of a pound of bacon into narrow strips and scatter over the scallops. Bake 12 minutes in the oven or under a broiler.

Baked Fish With Potato Stuffing.—Pare and cook five medium-sized potatoes with one good-sized onion in boiling salted water until tender. When tender, remove the onion and mash, adding butter, cream or milk, and seasoning to taste. Prepare the fish and salt well on the inside before putting in the stuffing. Sew up and rub the fish well with flour, cut diagonal slashes on each side of the backbone and insert five narrow strips of salt pork. Dust with salt, pepper, and celery salt. Pour around the fish a can of condensed tomato soup, one tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one tablespoonful of catsup and one-third of a cupful of water. Bake until tender, serve garnished with sliced cooked eggs and the tomato sauce poured over all.

Any fresh fish stuffed and baked, if basted with a snappy french dressing, a bit of garlic or onion juice several times during the cooking, will be very much finer flavored.

Although these are only common field daisies, we feel sure that the sick and poor who cannot get out and enjoy these lovely daisies, were very happy and pleased to receive them. No doubt too, the daisies were very proud to be picked to go on this wonderful mission of charity.

A card was received and read from the Flower Guild thanking the club for sending flowers to them.

We are to receive some lovely posters soon to remind us of this good work, watch for the posters.

At the close of this long business meeting our hostess served delicious cake and lemonade.

ORLAND PARK

The James Cannon—Lillawitz dispossessed case which has been creating much interest in Orland Park the past week, came up for another hearing in the Cook County Circuit court in Chicago Tuesday morning and the court granted Mr. Cannon the right to his garden which he had planted before the other case was tried. The eviction order which accompanied the first court order still stands so far as known.

FRANKFORT

IN MEMORIAM

KNIPPLE—In fond and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Raymond J. Knipple, killed by an E. J. & E. engine, three years ago today, June 29, 1927.

We ever think of you dear son
And our hearts are sad with pain,
Oh! this world would be a heaven,
Could we hear your voice again.

Why did he go when life seemed fair,
And no dark clouds were near,
To dim the brightness of our lives or start a bitter tear,
As time goes on we miss him so.
We wonder why he had to go,

Oh Ray, dear Ray, we can't forget that awful stinging blow,
Your sudden death brought to our hearts
That day three years ago.

Loving Mother and Father

He bade no one a last farewell
He said goodbye to none,
His loving heart ceased to beat.
Before we knew it, he was gone.
His cheery smile and kindly ways,
Are pleasant to recall,
He had a kind word for every one,
And died beloved by all.

TRUE TALES OF THE TELEPHONE

A Clinic for Ailing Poles

TELEPHONE poles have their maladies, just as human beings do. Pine and chestnut timber fall prey to fungus, despite the most thorough preventive measures. Specimens of wood suspected of infection are sent to the Bell Telephone Laboratories for microscopic examination and diagnosis, as if to a hospital clinic.

An exceedingly delicate slicing apparatus, the microtome, cuts off thin sections of wood, usually from .0002 to .0006 of an inch in thickness, which are mounted on glass slides. The microscope then reveals the most minute details of wood structure, the depth and direction of penetration of creosote used as a preservative and the identity and life history of the fungus within the cells. Usually microphotographs are taken in order to facilitate further study and for record purposes. Data obtained in many separate examinations form the basis of a comprehensive study of the protection of poles against decay and deterioration. The study of wood preservation is an illustration of the Bell System's never-ending search for scientific knowledge that may be transformed into more dependable service.

The first telephone directory ever issued in the world was published in New Haven in February, 1878, one month after the opening of the world's first commercial exchange. With the recent death of Emil A. Gessner, for many years a prominent pharmacist of New Haven, whose name appeared in this first telephone directory, there remains only one of the original subscribers now living. He is Dr. E. L. R. Thomson, whose father, Dr. C. S. Thomson, was also among those early believers in the telephone.

TELEPHONE OPERATOR SAVES VALUED VIRGINIA RECORDS

Some of the oldest records in existence in the state of Virginia, including various deeds and papers executed before the Revolutionary War, together with much information concerning original English families, were saved from destruction by fire recently through quick action on the part of Mrs. Annie M. Mrs. Taylor is credited with being instrumental also in saving the Eastville business section as well as the Eastville Court House. It was in the Eastville Court House, the Northampton county seat, that these valuable old records and papers were kept.
